GARBLED messages, in French and Italian, picked up by radio stations in San Francisco and elsewhere on the Pacific coast, come undoubtedly from Nobile's dirigible, Italia.

But the location of the airship was not given, and hope rests on search at random inside the Arctic circle.

FORTUNATELY, Gen. Nobile has provisions for a month, with sleds and as full equipment as could be carried. He and his companions are men of courage, and hope need not be abandoned for several weeks.

CAN the human mind conceive anything more dramatic than those messages in two languages, coming out of the frozen North Pole region, asking for help?

Who would have dared predict such a wonder 25 years ago?

AMONG Democrats the Presidential nomination is settled. It's all over for Gov. Smith, except the campaign.

The question is, "Who shall run for Vice President?" Some stalwart friend of the honest farmer is wanted, one that "could capitalize the Republican farmers' hostility to the President's McNary-Haugen veto."

The hostility exists. But how are you going to make a farmer, born and bred Republican vote Democratic?

THE Ethiopian does not change his skin, or the leopard his spots, least of all in politics.

Change from one party to another requires independent thought, and that is painfully difficult.

H. G. WELLS has a plan for management and government of this earth, with one board of directors running the whole thing.

Religions, says Wells, have run their course. Christianity, which began with "the completest communism," has become the completest capitalism.

"Take all thou hast and give to the poor," has been changed to "Get all thou canst, and devil take the hindmost."

BUDDHISM began in complete renunciation. Buddha let the hungry tigress eat his body. Now vilest superstition replaces Buddha's teachings—and so it goes.

MR. WELLS' plan is interesting, like those of Plato, in his "Republic," Moore in his "Utopia," and Karl Marx, in his book that became the foundation of modern socialism.

Each one would work as well as the other, that is to say, not at all. Yet each is useful, for it makes men think, and that is important.

THE human race is an individual on a bigger scale, and it is in its infancy. It is useless to contemplate a baby two years old and plan to make a man of it in six months.

You must observe how and at what rate your race or individual can grow, then do what you can to direct and promote good growth.

THE most important work now is to encourage thought and distribute knowledge. And the greatest agency is the public school.

"Give light, and the people will find their own way." Give good public schools and you give light.

ARTHUR KEITH, heavyweight British scientist, denies the possibility of life after death. "Mind, soul and spirit are manifestations of a living brain and cease to exist when the brain dies."

Many scientists discuss that which they can't possibly understand.

F. G. BONFILS, owner and boss of the Denver Post, says:

"I am living now, and so far as I know I wasn't living a few years ago.

"If that can happen, anything can happen, so why shouldn't I be living a few years or a few hundred million years from now?" That's common sense. If it can happen once, it can happen twice, or a million times.

EVERY day, year in and year out, 2,000,000 Americans are ill. The average worker loses eight days a year through illness.

What the country needs is intelligent PREVENTION.

THE A. O. Smith Company, employing several thousand men in Milwaukee, retains a staff of medical experts whose business it is to examine with the greatest care and without charge and without compulsion every employe from the president down.

Each is told exactly what his physical condition is and how to circumvent any illness that may threaten.

MR. HALEY FISKE'S big Metropolitan Life Insurance Company started this work among its thousands of employes, in addition to advertising extremely valuable health warnings.

Many big concerns, including the Federal Reserve Bank, have followed the good example.

The most valuable men in every organization are often those most in need of warning, as shown by heart statistics.

THERON KILANDER wants a good place to park his car for the 500-mile automobile race on the Indianapolis speedway day after tomorrow.

So, on Saturday, he parked his car at the entrance to be first inside the gate. There he waits and sleeps.

If each man took as deep interest in his own race for success as he does in somebody else's race, there would be fewer at the speedways, race tracks and baseball parks.

Burning House Hero's Pyre

SOUNDED ALARM!

HIS PYRE

The home of Richard W. Lemm, 8207 Frankstown avenue, frame structure which Robert Donlon saved from fire four months ago when he rescued three people, today became his pyre. He was burned to death in a clothespress seeking escape from his fiery room. When fire was discovered, Mrs. Mary Lemm, 65, was awaiting removal to a hospital for an operation and fled to the yard. Evelyn Sanker, 16, rear of 8201 Frankstown avenue, discovered the flames and notified Mrs. Vera Goettmann, 8201 Frankstown avenue, who turned in an alarm. The house was an inferno when firemen arrived.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The Vare machine in Philadelphia and the Mellon machine in Pittsburgh were guilty of "cheating and vote stealing" at every election in Pennsylvania since 1922, former Gov. Gifford Pinchot testified today at a hearing by the Senate Elections Committee on the contest of William B. Wilson (Dem.), to unseat Senator-elect William S. Vare (Rep.), of Pensylvania.

Pinchot said his charges of fraud were based on what he was told by election officials, what he read in newspapers and "my general knowledge of election conditions in Pennsylvania."

His testimony frequently provoked arguments between Roland B. Mahaney, counsel for Wilson, and Francis Shunk Brown, Vare attorney. Scores of objections, raised by Brown, were sustained by the committee.

DETAIN GIRL KIDNAPING, DEATH SUSPECT

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 28.—Frank Hagnedush, 40, of Caldwell street, Youngstown, said to be formerly a resident near the Schilling farm at Salem was detained here this forenoon by Police Capt. Dominick Thompson and detectives.

The suspect is said to answer the general description of a man seen kidnaping Beatrice Rosenbaum, 10, missing girl found dead in a ravine on the Schilling farm. Police believe that someone familiar with the Schilling farm took the girl there. The trip through the ravine by Robert and Melvin Lippiatt, who found the body late Sunday, was the first visit any member of their family had paid to the ravine in a year. They were seeking a lost cow.

Police of this city questioned Max Rosenbaum, father of the dead girl, and her two brothers, David and Leo. After five hours' questioning the Rosenbaums were permitted to go home.

The Lippiatt boys' father notified police he saw a car stop near a wooded ravine Friday night, and saw two persons in it, but did not know if one was a child.

Death by exposure was the official verdict given last night by Coroner M. E. Hays, of Mahoning county, after an autopsy at a local morgue. The child's body was brought here from Salem last night. Beatrice had been without food for days and her feet were swollen and cracked as if they had been exposed to water, Hayes declared.

There was no evidence of the girl being attacked, Hayes added. He said there were no bruises or scars on the child's body to indicate foul play.

The girl was reported last seen two weeks ago when she entered an automobile occupied by a "middle-aged man."

18-YEAR-OLD SCOTTDALE BOY TRIED FOR MURDER

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 28.—An 18-year-old youth, John Wheeler, of Scottdale, went on trial for his life here today for the murder of his step-father, Meredith Leonard, last November 21. Abuse by the step-father of the young man's mother is alleged to have prompted the shooting.

SUB-STATION BLAST KILLS SHARON MAN

SHARON, Pa., May 28.—Charles Smoyer, 55, died today from burns suffered in an explosion at the sub-station of the Pennsylvania-Ohio Power Company here.

MOVE TO QUIT ON TUESDAY LOSES

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Under dramatic circumstances, Vice President Dawes today defeated the administration's resolution to adjourn Congress at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The action of the Senate, with Dawes' aid, left administration leaders in a quandry. The Senate first refused to remain in session until next Tuesday by a vote of 29 to 41, defeating the amendment to that effect, proposed by Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California.

Then the Senate declined to remain here until next Saturday, by a vote of 28 to 42.

Finally, it refused to adjourn tomorrow.

The action was a victory for supporters of Boulder Dam Legislation who, under the leadership of Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California, have demanded that the Senate remain in session until a vote is granted on the Swing-Johnson bill.

There was considerable jockeying on the three votes. Senator Fletcher (Dem.), of Florida, and Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, after voting to keep Congress here until June 5, changed and voted against the June 2 date.

Senator Dill (Dem.), of Washington, who voted against June 5, voted for June 2. On the final vote Senators Cutting (Rep.), of New Mexico, and Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, after voting against extending the date of adjournment suddenly switched and voted against adjourning tomorrow. This resulted in the tie, which Dawes broke by voting against adjournment.

On the final roll call, all party lines were destroyed. There were 20 Republicans and 20 Democrats voting to adjourn tomorrow while 19 Republicans, 20 Democrats and a Farmer-Laborite voted against it.

Missing Woman In River

The Ohio River today yielded the body of Mrs. Susan Cottingham, 39, wife of George Cottingham, riverman, who disappeared Tuesday night while en route from her home on the towboat Helen C., moored in Monongahela River, to a store. It is believed she fell from the gang plank.

The body was discovered today floating in the back river, at Neville Island, by Neil Carter, Negro, of 1203 Wylie avenue, who notified Justice of the Peace John O'Connell. O'Connell took the body from the river and Cottingham identified it at the morgue.

Arbuckles—'Fatty,' Doris, Unhappy Together, Part

DORIS DEAN ARBUCKLE

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 28.

ROSCOE "FATTY" ARBUCKLE, former screen comedian, admitted today that he and his wife, formerly Doris Dean, Pasadena society girl and film actress, had separated. While he is living at a hotel his wife stops in their Beverly Hills home.

"We haven't gotten along happily for some time," Arbuckle said. "And if I've got to be lonesome, I might as well be lonesome here."

The couple was married in Hollywood, April 1, 1925, with many motion picture executives and stars attending the wedding. Arbuckle was divorced from Minta Durfee Arbuckle in Paris, the decree becoming effective eight days before his second marriage.

HOME HE SAVED HIS PYRE

The home which he saved from fire four months ago today became the pyre of Robert Donlon, 21.

Awakened as the home of Richard W. Lemm, 8207 Frankstown avenue, was in flames, Donlon, confused in the smoke and flame was trapped in a clothes press, it is believed, while seeking a door leading to the hall. When the flames were extinguished firemen found his body.

Mrs. Mary Lemm, 65 waiting to be taken to a hospital for an operation, escaped. After she had been taken to Pittsburgh Hospital neighbors told how Donlon, discovering the house afire on January 15, saved his father, Dennis Donlon, and Mr. and Mrs. Lemm.

The fire started in the lower rear part of the house and spread rapidly. Mrs. S. J. Moyer, also a roomer, had a fire burning in the laundry and was on the second floor when Evelyn Sanker, 16, of 8201 Frankstown avenue, rear, discovered the flames and sounded an alarm.

When Mrs. Lemm was found wandering in the yard, she told firemen that every person was out of the house. They rescued a cash box for her from her second floor bedroom.

It was not until the flames were extinguished that the firemen found Donlon's body in the closet. He evidently awakened while the fire was in progress and mistook the closet door for the door to the hall.

Donlon and his father, Dennis Donlon, occupied a room on the second floor. The father was away at work.

While firemen battled the flames, an ambulance arrived and took Mrs. Lemm to Pittsburgh Hospital. The loss was placed at $8,500.

BRADFORD COUNTY CORONER FLU VICTIM

TOWANDA, Pa., May 28.—Dr. M. C. Hunter, 58, coroner of Bradford county, died last night following an attack of influenza. He was one of the founders of the People's Hospital at Sayre and a member of its board of trustees. Dr. Hunter was born at Montrose, Susquehanna county, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1892. He was a Mason and Odd Fellow.

Plane Off to Find Nobile

OSLO, Norway, May 28.—(AP.)—Lieut. Luetzon Holm, Norwegian flying ace, started at noon today from Horten with a Norwegian navy hydro-airplane for Tromsoe on the first leg of a trip to Spitzbergen to begin a search in the air for the missing dirigible Italia.

Lieut. Holm, who intends first to explore the north and northeast coasts of Spitzbergen, hoped to arrive at Tromsoe at midnight. He will immediately board the sealer Hobby, hired by the Italian government for the Spitzbergen trip, which is ready to start as soon as the naval monoplane is loaded aboard her.

Loeut. Holm was accompanied by Mechanic Myre.

MAY HAVE LANDED

Arctic experts spent the week-end discussing all possible contingencies concerning the Italia. In view of meteorological reports, Capt. Riiser Larsen said that the Italia probably had landed somewhere north of Spitzbergen and that it was not likely that the ship had been driven any further.

Lieut. Holm, therefore, has been given orders to fly from Kings Bay northward, searching along the ice-covered coast of North and Eastern Spitzbergen. If this theory should prove correct it is felt that there is good hope that the crew of the Italia can be rescued.

An unconfirmed rumor is being circulated here today that Gen. Umberto Nobile's representative in Vadsoe, Maj. Vatani, had received a report from the Italia's base ship Citta di Milano that the latter had caught an emergency wireless signal on a wave length of 900 meters. This is the wave length of the missing dirigible.

ICE BLOCKS RESCUE

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, May 28.—(AP.)—Ice, which might have caused the collapse of the dirigible Italia, today blocked the first attempt to search for the missing airship.

The Citta di Milano, base ship of Gen. Umberto Nobile's polar expedition, sailed from Kings Bay to make a preliminary survey of rescue conditions. At 9 p. m. last night the vessel reported by wireless that she was off Amsterdam Island off the Northern coast of Spitzbergen. A strong wind was piling ice floes against the coast, the message added.

A grim silence fell over the little group of Italians left behind at the hangar here. At that time it was exactly 60 hours since the dirigible had been in touch with headquarters.

One of the hypotheses discussed concerning the fate of the airship was that ice and wet snow forming on the airship might have wrecked it. It was recalled that the dirigible Norge, in which Gen. Nobile flew over the North Pole two years

Ammonia Fumes Fell 2

Overcome by ammonia fumes leaking from a tank in the cellar of the Mohican Market, 310 Market street, shortly after 1 o'clock today, a girl employe and a fireman were taken to the Mercy Hospital while customers and clerks were routed in confusion.

The victims are: Miss Beulah Wells, 17, of 610 Sherman avenue, North Side, and James Ewart, 34, a member of No. 1 Engine company.

A still alarm was sent to No. 1 Engine company. Firemen, donning gas masks, went into the gas-filled basement to stop the leak in the store's refrigeration system.

Miss Wells, it is said, collapsed from excitement and fumes and was taken to the hospital by police. No estimate of the damage was made. James Cairney, manager of the market, said the loss probably would be light.

District Battalion Chief George Pfarr, en route to the Mohican market, had a narrow escape from injury when his driver swerved to avoid hitting another machine which pulled in front of them at Liberty avenue and Barker way, and collided head-on with a coal truck. The truck was driven by John Scott, of 87 Bridge street, Sharpsburg. Ed Griffin, driver of the other car, was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

EX-CONVICT SENTENCED IN VANDERGRIFT THEFT

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 28.—Joe Sciello, of Vandergrift, confessed bandit, who on January 2, 1925, robbed the jewelry store of Isano Prosech, and escaped with $300 worth of gems, was sentenced to serve from three to six years in the penitentiary Saturday. He had been arrested when discharged from the penitentiary.

NEW PEACE TREATIES URGED

TULSA, Okla., May 28.—Following three days of conferences, the standing committee on Christian education today reported its recommendations to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church meeting here.

The committee recommends that the assembly "join with the whole of Christendom in grateful recognition of the progress of negotiations between the leading world powers looking to the organization of a multi-lateral peace pact outlawing war as a method for the settlement of international questions" and that it call upon "all political parties to include in their party platforms declarations in support of the Eighteenth Amendment and all supporting Federal and state legislation" and to nominate candidates committed to prohibition enforcement.

"Against the widely current theories that deny the divine origin of marriage and the permanency of its sacred vows the church must earnestly oppose her profound convictions as to the holy and abiding character of marriage. Upon the preservation of the sanctity of marriage as an institution ordained of God for the blessing of the race rests the happiness of men and the moral integrity of society. Those entering the marriage relation should be enjoined as to the solemn significance of the vows assumed and should be lovingly counselled as to the mutual obligations and duties in which they are bound throughout all their lives."

PRINCETON UP TODAY

The report of the committee of 11 containing the proposed new plan for government of Princeton Theological Seminary is to be acted upon late this afternoon. The debate on this report began last Saturday, but others desired to be heard and changes were made in the docket to permit further discussion. Heated controversy is almost inevitable, for conditions at the seminary have been the subject of a long-standing quarrel between two groups formed on doctrinal lines. Indications point to adoption of the proposed changes, which are being supported by the liberal wing of the denomination.

SPEAKS FOR EDUCATION

Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, pastor of the Shadyside Church, Pittsburgh, was in charge of a popular meeting under auspices of the board last night. In his address Dr. Kerr said:

"There are more young men and women going to college in America than in all the rest of the world. As never before the world of our day is going to school. We stand for education for the supremacy of the spritual. We believe in the reality and validity of personality. We stand for the spiritual interpretation of education. In this we take common ground with our Catholic and Jewish friends. We contend for an interpretation of science and history that gives a man a right to be an immortal soul. When scientists like Sir Arthur Keith of the British Association for the Advancehment of Science proclaim that man is only mechanism and death an endless sleep, we have a right to protest and do protest."

PROHIBITION RALLY

Sunday afternoon Dr. J. W. Cloudy, of Pittsburgh, general director of the department of moral welfare, presided at a meeting

"In the interest of temperance and prohibition, which has been won by sacrifice of life and treasure.

"Whether shall it endure depends ultimately upon the men who are elected to office through political parties. There can be no evasion of duty on the part of those who seek the high office of President."

Mrs. Ella A. Pool, of New York, president of the International W. C. T. U., spoke on "A New Crusade of Education for Prohibition."

BEAVER, Pa., May 28.—Rather than board a prisoner many months while working out a fine, Beaver county authorities decided to inaugurate the installment plan for the payment of the fine.

U. S. SHIP GETS MESSAGE

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP.)—The United States naval transport Chaumont, stationed near Tientsin, China, reported to the Navy Department today through Admiral Mark L. Bristol that she had picked up the following message at 10:40 p. m. last night:

"C Q de asrao 3 Qtc dirigible General Nobile is in distress asking for help. He is supplied with a short wave 30:33 meter radio."

The message picked up by the Chaumont appeared definitely to settle any mystery connected with the similar message picked up in California, since it obviously did not come from the Italia, but was simply a message sent out to notify other stations of the plight of the dirigible.

The Chaumont, being in Chinese waters, could pick the message up more clearly from Vladivostok, where it apparently originated, than could the stations on the Pacific coast, which had difficulty reading it.

TRACING GARBLED MESSAGE

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—(INS.)—Three expert operators of the Radio Corporation of America, as well as several amateur operators, were keeping a constant vigil here today on short wave lengths, ranging from 30 to 40 meters, in the hope that additional signals may be intercepted that will afford some clue to the location of Gen. Umberto Nobile's missing dirigible Italia.

The trio of experienced radio men were assigned to the task of concentrating on the 30 to 40-meter range as the result of a distress call, picked up early yesterday by Radio Corporation and amateur operators here.

Repeated over a period of some two hours, the message, in substance, read:

"Dirigible Italia of Gen. Nobile in distress. Supplied with short wave length 30.33 radio.

DIRIGIBLE ITALIA.

"General Umberto Nobile."

THOUGHT DIRECT FROM BLIMP

The location of the approximate point where the call originated or was relayed had not been ascertained early today, and all efforts to communicate with the sender proved futile. This, coupled with the fact that the call was received in somewhat garbled form with several words misspelled, led experts of the Radio Corporation to discard the earlier theory that it might have been broadcast by an amateur station in Northern Siberia and to express the opinion that the message was transmitted directly from the lost dirigible.

On the other hand, Charles E. Blalack, an amateur operator who intercepted the call, declared that, in his opinion, the signals were broadcast by an amateur in Siberia in the vicinity of Vladivostok.

Operators at the naval radio station here, though failing to intercept any signals from the polar regions, nevertheless maintained an alert lookout on the short wave length range.

HOW TO ESCAPE FROM JAIL

OUT OF ALLEGHENY COUNTY JAIL

Steel bars and high stone walls failed to deter one James Watson, Negro, with a penchant for breaking into houses and out of jails, when he gave local authorities an exhibition of his rare skill by wriggling out of the Allegheny county jail. Photo shows how Watson, who hid in a dog kennel from Saturday night until Sunday afternoon, climbed to the top of an outside incinerator, thence to the bars on a window which he scaled to the wall on the left and dropped 40 feet to Sixth avenue and freedom for a few hours. He was captured in Wylie avenue last night.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., May 28.—Huntington now has a population of 79,920, according to an estimate published in the new city directory, an increase of 62 per cent over the federal census of eight years ago.

SCHOOL STRIKERS DECLARE TRUCE

PORTSMOUTH, O., May 28.—(AP.)—A truce was declared today in the strike of the 150 students of the Glenwood High School, New Boston, and the entire delegation of strikers will return to their classes in order to permit the 23 seniors among the strikers to graduate.

At a meeting this morning of striking students, their parents and business men, supporters of the strikers, officials of the high school, F. E. Cooper, one of the members of the board who voted not to re-engage the three teachers over whom the strike started, and T. Howard Winters, assistant state director of education, it was emphasized that the seniors would necessarily have to return to school to graduate and the strikers then agreed to call a truce.

The fight to reinstate B. R. Higley, principal; John E. Quick, and Miss Martha Pollitt will not be dropped however, as the students announced that they would carry on their battle through the courts during the summer vacation period. The students have been on a strike since last Tuesday.

ESCAPES 5TH TIME; IN AGAIN

James Watson, Negro, with a penchant for breaking into houses and breaking out of jail, was clamped down with shackles in a cell in the Allegheny county jail following his fifth successful jail break yesterday afternoon.

Watson, awaiting action of the grand jury on charges of housebreaking, was recaptured five hours after his escape by Patrolman Arch Marone, who arrested him on May 7. He was found hiding at 1312 Wylie avenue.

Watson's cleverness in making the getaway yesterday has caused no end of comment among jail and police officials here. The prisoner boasts of four other successful breaks—two at Atlanta, Ga., one at Nashville, Tenn., and another at Birmingham, Ala., jail attaches say. But for the quick-wittedness of a pedestrian who saw Watson slide down a rope on the Sixth avenue side of the jail, the fugitive probably would have made good his escape. The pedestrian called the attention of a motorcycle patrolman to the prisoner and then notified jail officials.

Patrolman Arch Marone recaptured the fugitive at 1312 Wylie avenue, where the Negro was found hiding in the kitchen.

Jail officials say Watson hid in a dog house until after the Sunday religious services got under way yesterday afternoon. He then climbed to the roof of a pigeon house in the jail yard, from which he reached a window of the kitchen storeroom and fished out a 28-foot section of rope. By climbing to the top of an outside incinerator and fastening the rope to a bar on a window, the prisoner let himself down the outside wall to the sidewalk.

Warden John McNeil was not in the jail when the escape occurred. He said he would recommend installation of special barriers to prevent access to materials from the prison yard, lack of which, he declared, made Watson's escape possible.

BANK BANDITS ELUDE NET; SEARCH WIDENS

International News Service.

LAMAR, Colo., May 28.—Search for the four bandits who robbed the First National Bank of this city, leaving a trail of murder in their wake, centered today along the Southern Kansas-Colorado state line. Leaders of the posse expressed fears, however, that the quartet of desperadoes had eluded their net.

The casualty list to date stands at three known dead, two wounded and one missing. A. N. Parrish, president of the looted bank, and his son, John Parrish, cashier, were killed outright during the holdup. Dr. W. W. Wineinger, of Dighton, Kan., was slain, presumably by the bandits, after being lured from his home to attend one of the wounded desperadoes.

NO WORD FROM TELLER

The fate of E. A. Kessinger, bank teller, who was abducted by the bandits, is still unknown. It is believed he has either been killed or is being held as a "pawn" through whom the bandits hope to negotiate for their lives and assurance of a fair trial if they are cornered by the posse.

Reports from Hill City, Kan., state that two men from that place were shot and seriously wounded when a sheriff's posse mistook them for the bandits. This incident reflects the hair-trigger tension throughout the district. Undoubtedly the bandits, when found, will be shot on sight.

MORE JOIN MANHUNT

The greatest manhunt in the history of the West has gathered momentum each hour since the daring bank robbedy of last Wednesday. Virtually every male resident within a hundred miles of the Kansas-Colorado state line has taken up arms and joined one of a dozen army-like posses scouring the district.

WESTMINSTER BANS FRESHMEN "RUSHING"

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., May 28.—Freshman rushing has been banned by the faculty of Westminster College. "Freshmen shall not be eligible for pledging next year," the resolution reads. A new dormitory will house all freshmen next term.

More Politics Than Relief Says Will

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 28.—You can always tell when the Senate is getting near a close. The Boulder Dam bill always comes up. Some day somebody with the interest of that bill at heart will bring it up the first day of Congress, and then if some Arizona senator can talk from then to the close, why it will be a record and not just a repetition.

Will Rogers.

They knew Coolidge would veto the farm bill. Well, if they had had the farmers' interest at heart and wanted to see him receive some help this summer, why didn't they have some kind of compromise bill ready that he would sign. No, sir. There was more politics than relief in that bill. Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

AIR RACE IS ARMY VS. NAVY

With the arrival of all pilots and their aides for the national elimination balloon races Wednesday, things began to hum this afternoon at Bettis Field and at headquarters in the William Penn Hotel.

The Army and Navy pilots, between whom there always is keen competition in events of this kind, already have begun preparations for a real battle for supremacy of the air. The Army has three entrants in the big Memorial Day event, and the Navy is represented by two teams.

Lieut. C. E. Bauch, commanding officer of the Navy team, was the last of Uncle Sam's "boys in blue" to arrive. He came direct from Lakehurst, N. J., where he is attached to the Navy dirigible Los Angeles. He reported that the giant airship is all ready to take off on its flight to Pittsburgh early Wednesday morning. Orders have been received from the Navy Department authorizing the trip and the only thing to interfere with the airship's visit, Lieut. Bauch says, will be the weather.

"We will know definitely by tomorrow whether the Los Angeles will be able to make the trip here," declared Lieut. Bauch this morning.

The Army teams are in charge of Lieut. H. McCormick, of Scott Field. Capt. W. E. Kepner and Capt. Edmond W. Hill will pilot two of the balloons from Scott Field and Lieut. Paul Evert will pilot the third entrant from Langley Field.

Two important meetings are scheduled for today, with an informal dinner and reception following at 7 o'clock in the William Penn Hotel. The pilots and their aides will meet the Pittsburgh debutantes, who will sponsor the big gas bags at Wednesday's air derby, at 4 o'clock this afternoon at tea in the University Club. Following this the pilots will gather at a business session in the William Penn Hotel at 5:30, when they will draw lots for position and the order of their take-off. The rules of the meet will be read to the teams and other important phases of the elimination contest will be discussed by the managers and team members.

Throughout the day the pilots and their assistants visited Bettis Field to study the "lay of the land" and complete arrangements for the transportation of their equipment to the McKeesport hangars.

GETTING READY!

SEATS RUSHED

Thirty thousand reserved seats have been erected at Bettis Field to accommodate spectators expected at the National Balloon Races Wednesday. In addition to the seats, accommodations have been made for as many more balloon fans and their automobiles. Those in charge of arrangements say they can care for the largest crowd that ticket sales indicate will attend.

Pittsburgh As Others See Us

'When the historian or novelist, or perhaps the film camera comes to write the epic story of American development, what material will be found in Pittsburgh!"

—ADOLPH ZUKOR.

ADOLPH ZUKOR

ADOLPH ZUKOR, motion picture magnate, was born in Riese, Hungary, January 7, 1873; educated in Hungary and in evening schools in New York. He came to America in 1888 and for 15 years was engaged in the hardware, upholstery and fur business. Entered motion picture promotion in 1904 and associated with Marcus Loew, organizing the Famous Players. He resides in New York.

The word Pittsburgh suggests, of course, steel. It suggests smoke and grimy toil. Also it suggests such artistic and spiritual qualities as the International Art Exhibition stands for. It suggests a vast, busy, varied American population.

It is this human element in Pittsburgh that first comes to the mind of one in the moving picture industry when thinking of the city. Man cannot live by toil alone. And for his moments of relaxation and entertainment he turns more and more to the picture theater. Populations like those of Pittsburgh make possible the moving picture. So there is a responsibility upon the producer to give these people pictures which will be a recreation after their work, which will prove true when tested by their practical human judgment, which will stimulate their imagintaion and give them courage, laughter and a wider outlook.

• • • When the historian or novelist, or perhaps the film camera, comes to write the epic story of American development, what material will be found in Pittsburgh! From the days of Fort Duquesne down to the present, it has been the scene of much that was most typical in our country. From these associations, from its splendid situation, tremendous activity and productiveness, vital human aspirations, it is only reasonable to expect greatly significant contributions to the future.

Adolph Zukor

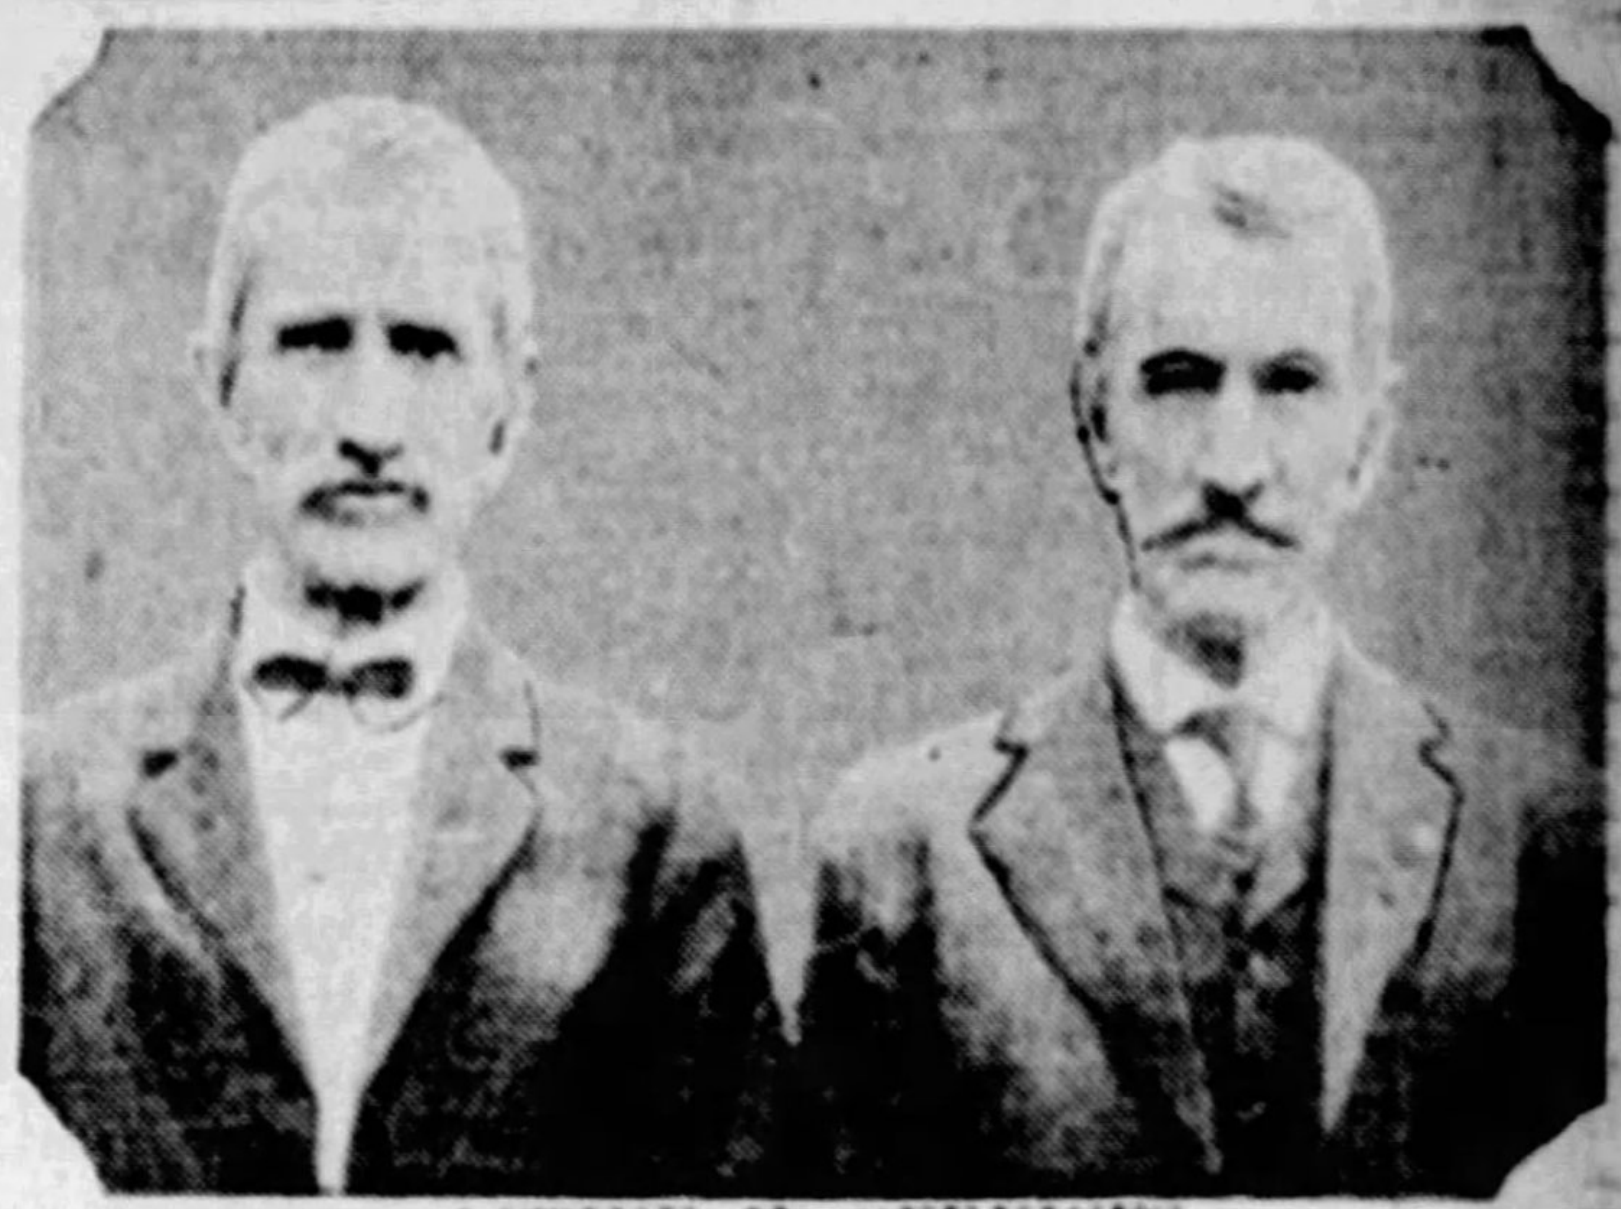
CIVIL WAR VETS TWINS



ACTIVE IN SERVICES

Twin brothers, Civil War veterans, will take active parts in Memorial Day services in Latrobe and Ligonier. They are John Lohr (left), Latrobe, and Michael Lohr, Ligonier, aged 86 years. Both ran away from home to join the Union Army and each served four years. John was taken prisoner and confined in Andersonville prison.

Weather Conditions.

The barometric pressure continues relatively low over the East, and the showery and thunderstorm conditions are still general throughout all the Atlantic Coast states and as far West as Indiana. Another low pressure area covers the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains and the western plains; lowest barometer, 29.72 inches at North Platte, Neb. This disturbance is producing cloudy and showery conditions over that section.

Clear skies prevail over the eastern and central plains, under the influence of relatively high pressure over that section. The temperatures are generally slightly below the seasonal normal, but there was no frost reported except in North Dakota and in Northern Minnesota.

River News.

The marks at Point Bridge at 10 a. m. today showed 11.1 feet and river stationary.

PENNA. MILITIA LAND IN FRANCE

CHERBOURG, France, May 28.—(AP.)—A good-will expeditionary force from Pennsylvania, 209 men, 12 officers strong, wearing uniforms and carrying their weapons, arrived in France yesterday aboard the George Washington.

The Pennsylvanians were welcomed aboard the vessel by the president of the Chamber of Commerce. Ashore there was a brilliant reception at the harbor railroad station, after which the Americans departed for Paris on a special train gaily bedecked with flags.

At their head was Mayor Harry A. Mackey of Philadelphia and they were met at the pier by Gen. William G. Price, Gen. Edward Martin, auditor general of Pennsylvania; Col. Henry Coulter, Greensburg, Pa., Maj. Gerard Brice, Mount Pleasant, Pa., who as an advance guard had come to France some weeks ago.

They are here to dedicate three monuments commemorating the achievements of Pennsylvania soldiers in the World War, one to the Twenty-eighth Division at Fismes tomorrow; one to the Eightieth Division at Nantillois Wednesday and one to all other Pennsylvanias at Varennes also on Wednesday.

Through special arrangements by the embassy and Gen. Price, the boys were allowed to land without going through the formality of the visa and were permited to bring their arms into the country, unboxed and uncrated. This is the first time that an armed force has landed in France since 1918.

Chosen from 209 units of the Pennsylvania National Guard, most of the men are sergeants and are said to be the pick of the units both physically and mentally.

The 12 officers are veterans of the World War, all of them having been wounded in action.

Train Wrecked By Auto, Road Plans Suit

FREEMONT, Neb., May 28.—(AP.)—Railroads have been defendants in so many damage lawsuits that the prospect of becoming a plaintiff — and against a motorist at that—holds a roseate tinge for the Chicago and Northwestern.

An automobile driven by Gilbert Anderson, a plumber, ran into a Northwestern freight train yesterday, derailing six cars. The machine struck the slow-moving freight with such force that the front trucks of a car left the tracks. Six cars followed before the train stopped. Railroad officials said the damage would approach $6,000.

Anderson's car was demolished, but he escaped injury. Representatives of the railroad said they are considering seeking damages.

DEL RIO MAID ABSOLVED IN HOAX

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—Dolores Del Rio, motion picture star, has issued a statement absolving Rosa Ayala, a former maid in her employ, of any suspicion in connection with a recently exposed kidnaping hoax and the theft of a $15,000 diamond ring.

Mrs. Ayala, widow of a general of the Mexican army, was named in a confession to the police as being implicated in a plot to kidnap Miss Del Rio and hold her for ransom.

In an endeavor to clear Mrs. Ayalya's name, in response to an appeal from many of her friends, Miss Del Rio stated she had never any desire to place a criminal charge against Mrs. Ayala and that the causes underlying the severance of the former maid's services in the Del Rio household did not reflect upon her character or honesty.

Gustave Carillo, the author of the "hoax," is unknown to Rosa Ayala, according to her statement.

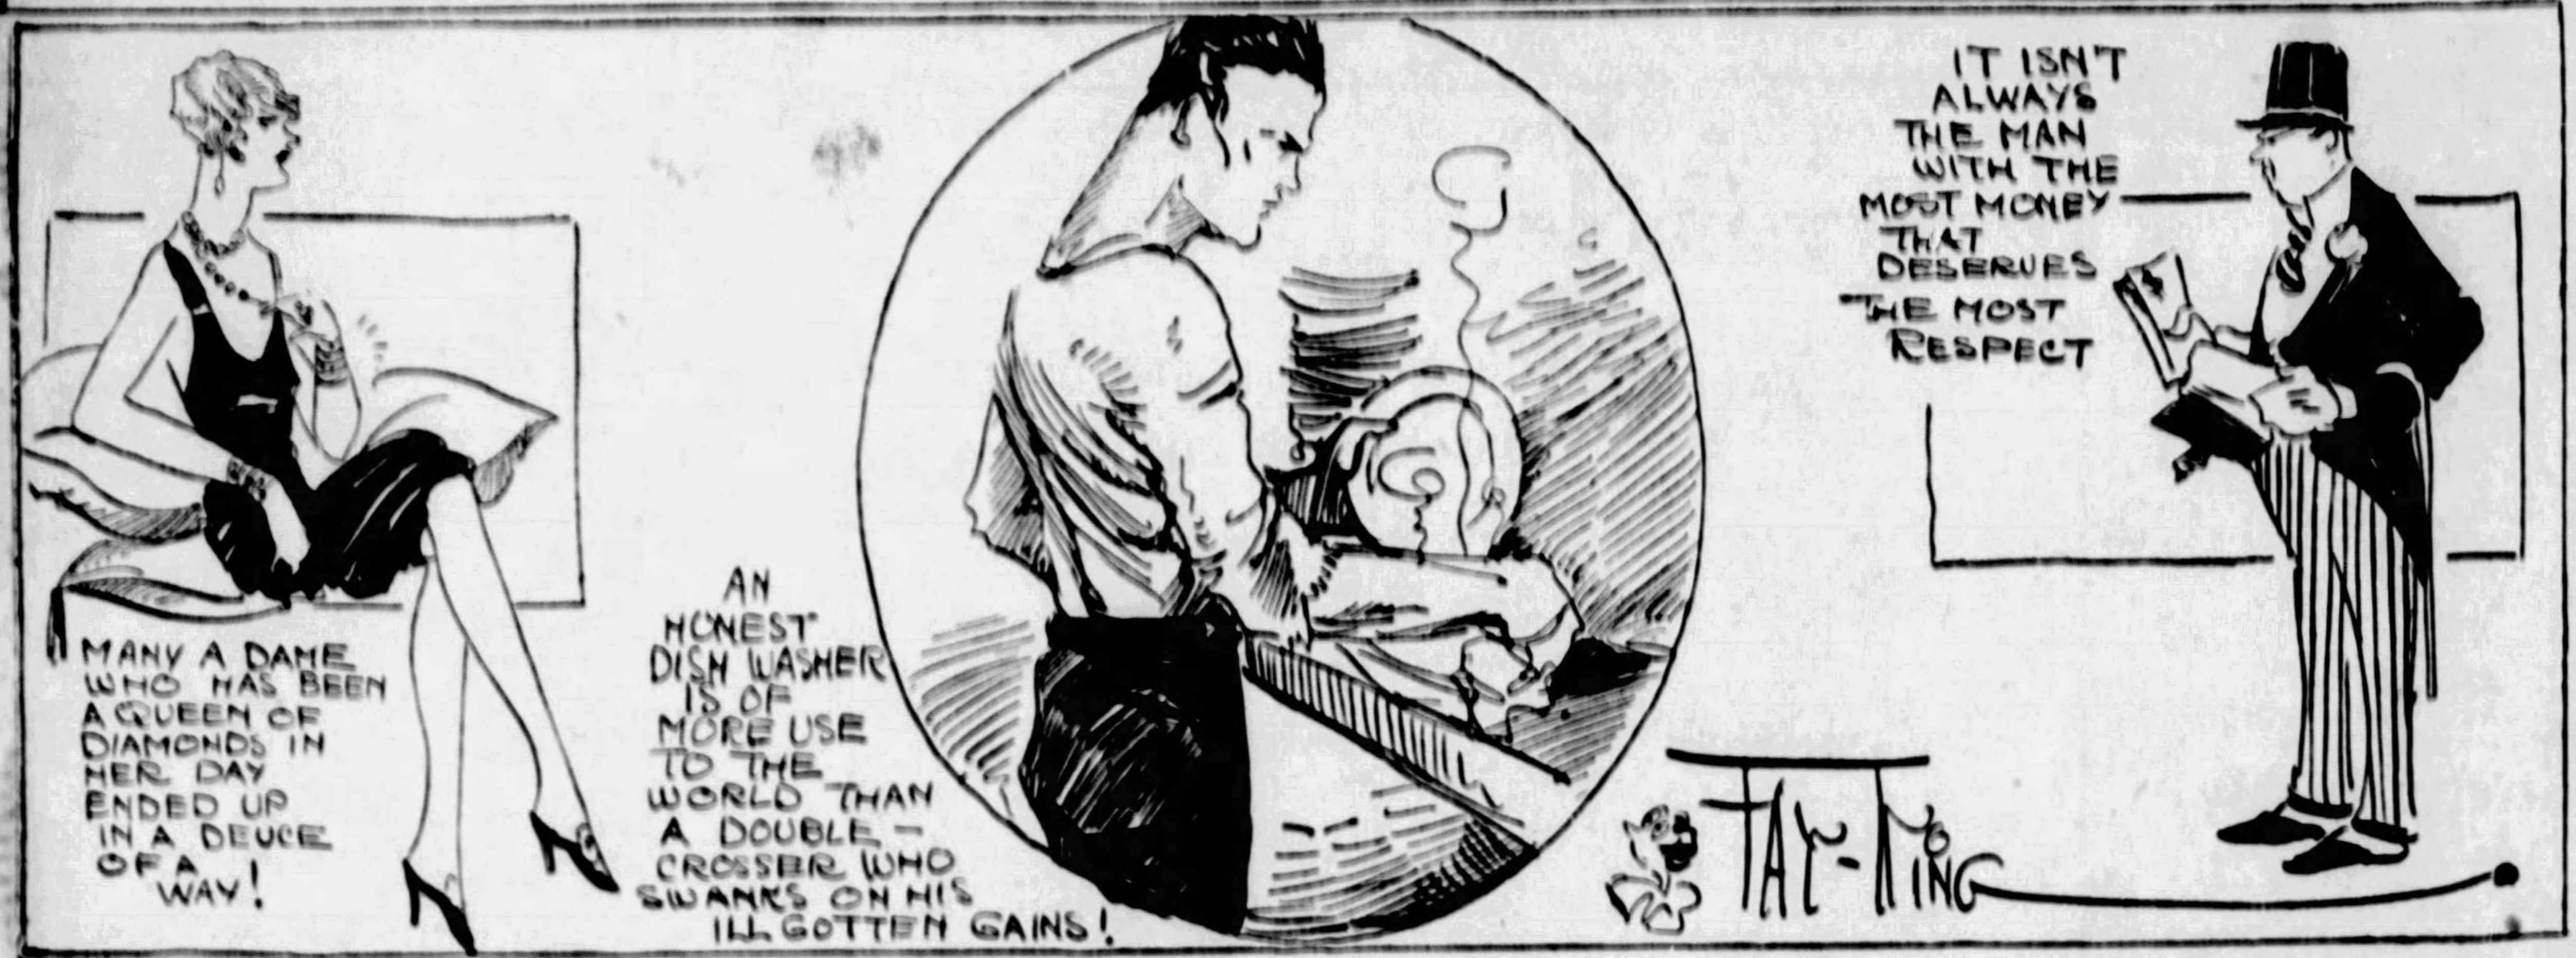
THE BEST PLACE TO SHOP AFTER ALL

Fay King Cites 'Pop,' 80, as Living an Ideal Life



MANY A DAME WHO HAS BEEN A QUEEN OF DIAMONDS IN HER DAY ENDED UP IN A DEUCE OF A WAY!
AN HONEST DISH WASHER IS OF MORE USE TO THE WORLD THAN A DOUBLE-CROSSER WHO SWANKS ON HIS ILL GOTTEN GAINS!
IT ISN'T ALWAYS THE MAN WITH THE MOST MONEY THAT DESERVES THE MOST RESPECT
FAY-KING

By FAY KING.

IN A NEIGHBORHOOD I often frequent there is a large stable.

Sitting in the sun, his chair tilted against the grimy walls, with a cat on each knee, sits "Pop!"

"Pop" must be 80 if he's a day. "Pop" is a merry old soul and enjoys his pipe. The cats purr. The horses know and love him.

Is "Pop" too old and not wanted? Don't you ever thing it! Every young fellow who works around the place swears by old "Pop."

"Pop" treated like the Boss, by right of years and affection!

About noon you'll see old "Pop" start to the nearby bakery to get buckets of coffee for the boys.

They just couldn't get along without "Pop." He beams on all of them and is happy because he knows he's wanted and needed.

"Pop" is a lot happier than some of these old guys who sit around the swell clubs and know that their relatives are only waiting for them to cash in!

Many men and women who go to humble, honest work are more welcome and loved than those who have accumulated great fortunes by breaking the hearts of those around them.

A dish washer who is faithful and welcome among those with whom he earns an honest living is better off than a double crosser who knows that he's hated and feared.

Many a dame who swanks around in diamonds and furs which by rights belong to others, may see the day when she'd be glad to change places with the honest maid who works for her.

Leading Hollywood directors decide girl's greatest charm is smooth skin

Screen stars know the velvety beauty of their skin heightens their allure. Directors have found that very little make-up is possible under the fierce lights of the close-up. Therefore stars must keep their skin always appealingly smooth, exquisite. 96% of all the lovely complexions you see on the screen are cared for with Lux Toilet Soap.

A GIRL'S lovely skin adds so much to her charm—a million hearts beat faster when the close-up reveals the radiant loveliness of a screen star.

To screen successfully in close-ups exquisite velvety skin is essential, say leading motion picture directors!

Nine out of ten screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap.

There are in Hollywood 433 important actresses, including all stars. 417 of these use Lux Toilet Soap.

All the great film studios have made it the official soap in dressing rooms.

CORINNE GRIFFITH and the beautiful bathroom that was especially designed to harmonize with the loveliness of this popular First National star.

"The thing I like best about Lux Toilet Soap is the wonderful smoothness of my skin after it. It has that same velvety feeling that the finest French soaps give you."

Corinne Griffith

MARION DAVIES' beauty has made her famous all over the world. Miss Davies writes, "A deliciously smooth skin is a great asset to a star. I am delighted with Lux Toilet Soap."

CLARA BOW is one of Paramount's most popular stars. She, too, uses this white, fragrant soap for the lovely skin she is famous for. "Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin in perfect condition," she says.

LUPE VELEZ brought with her from Mexico the fiery allure of the Spanish. "I find that Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin like velvet—with the softness, the attractiveness, it should have. You must have beautiful skin under those great lights of the close-up," this little Wampus star, now with United Artists, says wisely.

"I used to say 'it is impossible to find in America a soap of the luxury of imported soaps,' but then I found Lux Toilet Soap," GRETA NISSEN declares. "It feels delicious to my skin and makes it so soft and smooth."

BUTLER'SDEATH 7TH DURING SESSION

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP.)—Death's scythe has mowed down in the seventieth Congress the heaviest toll of members in recent years.

The number was brought to seven Saturday night when Representative Thomas S. Butler of Pennsylvania died. The others who died were Senator Andrieus A. Jones of New Mexico, Senator Frank B. Willis of Ohio, Senator Wooberidge N. Ferris of Michigan, Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, Representative James Gallivan of Massachusetts and Representative Thaddeus C. Sweet of New York.

While the death toll of the session is the largest in recent years other congressional terms have been marked by much heavier demises of members. In the sixty-fifth Congress 21 members died.

During the present session, the House has suffered the loss of two heads of important committees—Butler of the Naval Committee and Madden of the Appropriations Committee. Both had been in Congress more than a score of years and had grown white-haired in their service. Madden died "in harness," being fatally stricken with a heart attack in his office on April 27.

The death of Senator Willis occurred at Delaware, O., just prior to his appearance on a speaking platform in behalf of his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

The other two Senators were Democrats. Both died in Washington, Jones was the first member of Congress to succumb; he died on December 20 and Ferris, a comparatively new Senator, on March 23.

The deaths of the two other representatives occurred outside of Washington. Gallivan, a Democrat, died after an operation at Cambridge, Mass., on April 3, and Sweet, a Republican, was killed in an airplane accident at Cortland, N. Y., on May 1.

Funeral services for Representative Butler will be held at his home at Westchester, Pa., Tuesday afternoon. The body will lie in state today and tomorrow until funeral time.

Man Says Wife Is 'Babe Ruth' With Bat

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 28.—Through a divorce libel filed Saturday, Fayette county discovered a Babe Ruth in Mrs. Laura Bell of Tarr, who landed on her husband, Frank J. Bell of Fairbank for a "home run." At least, it is charged, she ran home after knocking her husband unconscious with a baseball bat. He said it was bad enough when Laura threatened to go back to her first husband, whom she had divorced to marry Bell, but when she "Babe Ruthed" him, threw hot water on him and otherwise abused him he decided to institute divorce proceedings.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A CURE FOR LONELINESS

By BERTHA McDONALD

MARY GRAYSON stirred the meat which was cooking on the range, she pushed the skillet and pots containing the evening meal back where the heat was less intense. Then she went out into the bare, treeless yard, shading her eyes as she peered anxiously toward the setting sun, eager for the first glimpse of her returning husband.

"Oh God help me bear it" she muttered prayerfully. "The —the loneliness—that's killing me!"

When she finally sighted a small black speck in the center of a cloud of dust some distance down the road, she sighed, wiped the tell-tale tears from her lashes and returned to the house. By the time Steve Grayson slouched in over the worn threshold of the door, the oilcloth was laid and appetizing odors from the steaming food upon the table reached his nostrils. A huge collie dog, with tail wagging vigorously, added to the welcome tendered the home-coming master of the little cabin.

"Down, Shep, down!" he commanded, as the dog jumped for his shoulders. "Can't you see I'm half starved? Well, what you been [illegible] today, Mollikins?" he went on, turning to his wife in an effort to promote cheerfulness.

"What do you suppose?" the woman retorted, unable to keep bitterness from creeping into her tone. "You don't think I've been to a matinee, do you, or taking afternoon tea with Mrs. Ritz-Carleton or some other high brow? No, Steve, I've been doing just the same old things. I'm sick to death of this whole lonesome, God-forsaken stretch of emptiness!"

Her voice shrilled with hysteria and in another moment a torrent of weeping had seized her. Sobbing aloud she went into the little bedroom and locked the door. That night Steve Grayson slept on the home-made box couch in the "front room" and next morning when his wife arose an hour past the usual time, she found her husband had gone. A note pinned securely to the back of the rocker in the front room met her gaze.

"Dear Molly," it read, "I'm more sorry than I can tell that you're feeling so miserable. I've taken care of all the stock so all you'll have to do is rest today. I'm off to try for the county's offering of two thousand for the capture of bandit Slow Joe. I've my own idea where he's hiding, and we sure need that money. If I get it you can take it and go home for a while. You keep Shep close by today and use your thirty-eight if you need to. Yours, Steve."

Mary Grayson's lip curled a little scornfully as she consigned the note to the blazing fire, but in another and saner moment her heart softened. After all she could not blame Steve for anything. She had married him eagerly enough because she adored him and had refused to be discouraged by his stories of how the West sometimes "got" a person who wasn't used to it.

"Oh, I just can't bear it!" she moaned aloud. "I love Steve but every young woman craves companionship. How can I have it here, 10 miles from the nearest neighbor?"

A shadow fell across the doorway and old Doctor Plummer from the village, 15 miles away, stepped in.

"Steve said you wasn't feelin' good, Mary," he announced. "An' I was comin' this way anyhow so I just dropped in to see what's ailing you."

For a long time after Doctor Plummer left, Mary sat in the old rocker in the front room, staring into space. She was still sitting there when she saw a strange unkempt man hobble past the window. He was evidently trying to get to the road. From the little she could see of him she guessed that he had been injured in some way.

Suddenly Steve's warning came back to her and the mission he had set out to perform. Instinctively she grabbed her trusty thirty-eight from the nearby-by clock shelf, spoke in a low voice to the sleeping collie and made for the kitchen door. The man's back was toward her as he crept slowly, with increasing difficulty toward the public highway.

"Hands up!" she commanded throatily. "Hands up and right about face! Be still, Shep," she said to quiet the snarling dog.

She stepped out into the open and, leveling her gun at the man, forced him into the house, where she locked him securely in a dark storeroom, where Shep stood guard outside the bolted door.

When Steve Grayson galloped hurriedly up to his cabin less than an hour later with the news that he had tracked and shot at Slow Joe and that the bandit had fled in this direction, Mary, his wife, pointed speechlessly at the closed door of the store room and then promptly fainted at her husband's feet.

"Cheer up, honey," Steve told her, as soon as she regained consciousness. "It's you that'll get that two thousand reward. I've got Joe handcuffed to the bench in there, and as soon as the sheriff gets here you can claim the money. When you get it you're going to hike for home and mother right away, you poor, lonesome little chick, you!"

"But—but Steve," Mary faltered, looking up at him tenderly. "I—I don't want to go now. Doc Plummer was here this morning and he says—er—he says I won't be so lonesome after a while. We'll need that two thousand to take care of the little tad, and—Steve—if he's a boy I want to name him after you!"

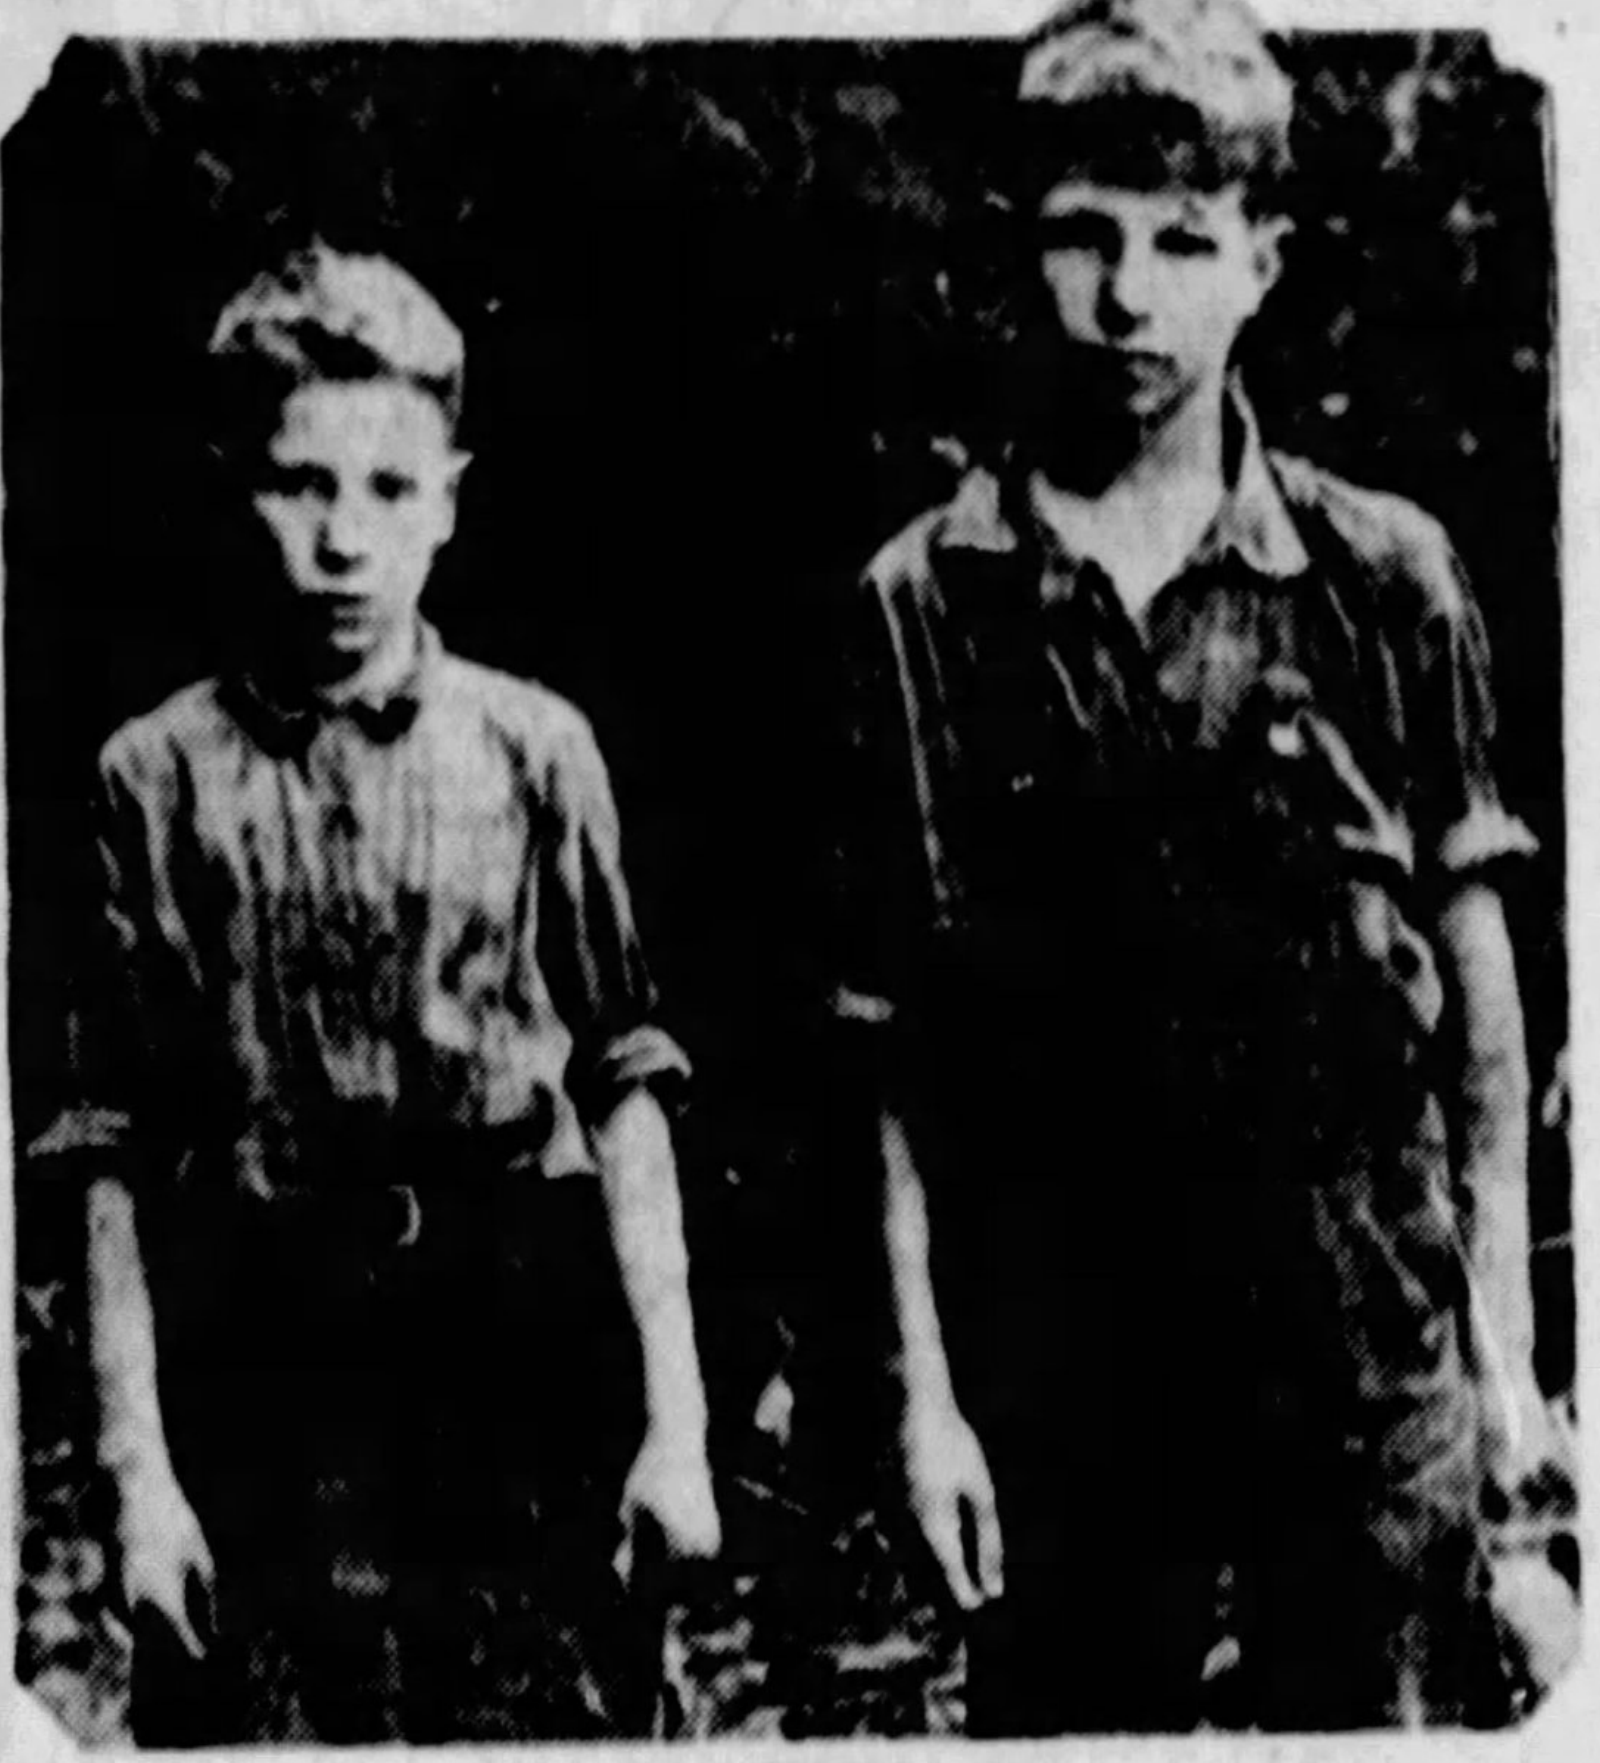
BOYS FIND BODY



HEROES

Robert Lippiatt, 15, and his brother, Melvin, 13, are the heroes of the long Youngstown (O.) search for little Beatrice Rosenbaum, 10, involving hundreds of police, civilians, Boy Scouts and public school students dismissed to aid in the hunt. These two boys found the child's body on a farm near that of their father, John Lippiatt, two miles from Salem.

RAVINE

The body was found in a small ravine near the Lippiatt farm, in which Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Kindsvatter, Salem, above, seeks further clues. The Lippiatts report to police since the discovery of the body that they saw a small car near their farm about the time that the child disappeared. The kidnaping theory is still given credence.

How To Be Beautiful

by Maria Jeritza

"Cool as a Cucumber"

WHEN hot weather comes swooping down on us suddenly, as it has a way of doing, we all long to look and feel "cool as a cucumber."

And there is no good reason why we should not keep cool.

Hot weather loveliness depends on comfort and helth. Daintiness is also, of course, indispensable to looking cool and attractive. But a fastidious woman woman cannot for an instant feel comfortable unless she knows she is dainty; so daintiness is included in the thought of comfort.

Some women have the mistaken idea that the way to keep cool in hot weather is to give up exercising and drink quantities of iced water and other soft drinks.

But you need exercise just as much in summer as in winter, for it will keep your blood circulating, thus keeping up your strength, energy and endurance. That means you will feel fit, ready for either hot or cold weather.

The wise course is to do your hard exercising as much as possible early in the morning or late in the afternoon, and to avoid the direct rays of the sun when they are torrid.

That little denizen of the tropics, the monkey, knows how to keep cool and well in hot weather. He certainly is active, but he keeps in the shade. It is said that a monkey would die in 30 minutes if exposed for that length of time to the direct rays of the tropical sun.

Choose hot-weather clothing that launders easily. Wearing one or two dark silk dresses week in, week out without cleaning, because they do not show the dirt, is repulsive to the very spirit of fresh summer daintiness. If you must wear dark colors, choose materials that do not "crock" and have them cleaned frequently, economizing in other ways.

Navy blue is a cooler shade than black and is just as serviceable. Washable silks in blue and white, blue and beige, green and cream or black and white can be bought and they make delightfully cool, attractive summer frocks.

Dress for coolness, comfort, cleanliness and chic, then the weather will not seem nearly as hot as though you wore tight, non-porous undergarments, dark, thick silks and heavy, tight hats.

The daily bath, daily setting-up exercises and food that is light but nourishing, including plenty of vegetables and fruit, are contributions to summer loveliness.

That symbol of coolness, the cucumber, is a great friend to the woman in quest of summer beauty. Served in salads with light French dressing, it furnishes vitamines for energy and valuable mineral juices for pure blood, strong, straight teeth and a clear complexion. And cucumbers are not fattening.

A cross-section of fresh cucumber, rubbed over your skin from time to time during the day will tend to bleach freckles.

Here's an ideal cold cream for summer use. It is cooling, cleansing, slightly bleaching and feeds the skin.

Cucumber essence	½ pint
Cucumber juice	1 ounce
Oil of almonds	½ pint
Olive oil	½ ounce
White wax	½ ounce
Spermaceti	½ ounce

Your favorite perfume oil, a few drops.

Walter Camp writes: "To be successful, be cool and deliberate." This advice is especially opportune when hot weather arrives. Do not hurry or worry, but do your work steadily, quietly. Then you will do it better, get more done, will keep serene and cool as a cucumber, and will have discovered a great secret of summer daintiness and charm.

PHOTOPLAY BEAUTIES -:- AND SOMETHING -:- FROM THE CIRCUS

Esther Ralston is selecting from "extras" in her pictures a man and a woman each to have a real role in her next succeeding production. Here with Miss Ralston is the first girl chosen, Mirra Rayo, 22, of Buenos Aires, who will be in "Sawdust Paradise."

Nancy Carroll, featured player in photoplays, wears a novelty necklace. It is a pearl choker from which hang seven strands of pearls.

Eddie Sarver, skeleton dude, and Beautiful Belinda, fat woman of the Ringling-Barnum circus, here Thursday and Friday, at Penn and Fifth avenues.

Doris Kenyon Balks at Playing Shadow to Film Star Husband So She'll Leave First National

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate.)

LOS ANGELES, May 28.

THE eternal problem that confronts professional people when they marry seems to have arisen in the Milton Sills-Doris Kenyon menage. It is understood that Doris' First National contract will not be renewed. The reason is given that she feels that a better opportunity may await her with some company where she will not be subordinated to her husband. Then, of course, it is said there is also a matter of salary in question. It seems there is something of a movie afoot to avoid renewing contracts at increased salaries.

In the case of Marian Nixon, for instance, it is said that Universal offered to retain the actress at a cut rather than an increase. But, somehow, this bright idea of saving on the overhead doesn't always work out. In Marian's case she was set for the part opposite Richard Barthelmess even before the ink on her release was dry.

It looks like they are getting ready to put one "build-up" behind Olga Baclanova—perhaps with a view to fitting her in Pola Negri's niche in the Paramount program. The first step is apparently calculated to surround Olga with an aura of foreign fascination. It is planned to drop Olga's first name right out of the picture, and to let her be known in future merely as Baclanova, after the manner of continental stars. But call her by any name you wish, this Russian girl is an excellent actress.

Over at the Fox studios they say that a half million dollars was spent to make Olive Borden a star. Then they let her go. Ask why, and only echo answers. But the story is that they now would like her back with them again. One reason may be that Olive is said to have a Movietone voice. Another may be that other companies seem to be cashing in on the half million the Fox folk say they spent in publicizing her. I also hear that Fox would like to have Sue Carol. Which piece of gossip makes it unanimous. They'd all like to have Sue. But Douglas MacLean has a contract, and they say he won't listen to reason.

If you want to scare the baby into good behavior just take it to see "Beggars of Life." Then you can threaten that one of the characters "will get you if you don't watch out." There is surely a fine collection of "menace" in the film. Thus far Wallace Beery, Jim Tully, Blue Washington, the gigantic Negro, and George Kotsonaros, the wrestler, have been selected. Just one close-up of those four faces and "Peck's Bad Boy" will be a "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

What they do to story names is nobody's business. Randall Faye's yarn, "Black Gang," will be made into a George O'Brien starring vehicle, under the title "Man and Woman." Richard Rosson will direct it just as soon as George returns to the old home lot at Fox's from his Warner Brothers' "Noah's Ark" adventure.

It seems that plans to film "La Tosca" in sunny Italy have been abandoned, for George Fitzmaurice is making all arrangements to produce it in Hollywood. Billie Dove will have the title role. After "Tosca" is completed, Fitzmaurice plans to direct a picture based on Don Byrne's story, "Changeling." The title will be changed before release.

NEW AMUSEMENT BOAT TO MAKE RIVER TRIPS

There will be dancing excursions with music by an orchestra of girls.

G. A. R. AND LEGION UNITE IN MEMORIAL SERVICES

RIDGWAY, Pa., May 28.—The G. A. R. and American Legion staged a joint memorial service last night in Ridgway Presbyterian Church. The sermon, "A Nation's Tribute," was delivered by the Rev. Frank E. Luhr, pastor of First Reformed Church. The Memorial Day services will be conducted by the G. A. R.

Another Flapper Goes Vamp In Film

Another of our screen flappers has gone vamp!

Blond, blue eyed—a veritable vest-pocket edition of femininity, Edna Murphy is sincere in the idea that breaking up homes is her forte on the screen.

"I'm so tired of being ga-ga daughters, sugar-coated sweethearts or bad naughty flappers," Edna said, with some real spirit behind the stamp of her small foot. "I'm even tired of always getting my man in the final reel. Losing him a few times and making an exit in a flood of sacrificial tears, or with a few good swear words would be much more fun."

Although Edna's bobbed head, her flapperish figure and quaint mannerisms suggest a college campus a great deal more than the vamp of a movie set, we are assured that she really "can look vampish with the proper make-up and clothes."

Mervyn LeRoy, her youthful director husband, made a test which, from all accounts, surpassed all expectations in excellence.

"You seeit 's really the Lilyan Tashman type of thing I want to do," the little actress explain further, "a sort of second woman who makes a noble sacrifice to save the hero for the heroine after she has taken up half the footage trying to separate the two. It sounds complicated, but if I get the chance I'll show them that I'm not the darling daughter type they think I am."

HOPWOOD PLAY SCHEDULED

There will be a special holiday matinee of "Mary's Other Husband" by the George Sharp players in the Pitt Wednesday, Decoration Day. "Why Men Leave Home" will be the offering of the George Sharp players in the Pitt the week beginning Monday, June 4. This play is from the pen of Avery Hopwood.

The Nixon players will present the mystery comedy, "The Last Warning," in the Nixon next week. "The Last Warning" was written by Thomas F. Fallon, from the novel called "The House of Fear," by Wadsworth Camp.

Among the principal acts in the Keith-Albee vaudeville bill in the Davis next week will be Jack Norton and Lucille Haley in a comedy skit, "Maybe I'm Wrong?"

OPERETTA COMPOSER TO BE HERE THURSDAY

Joseph Rumshinsky, composer of the operetta, "Some Girl," will be in Pittsburgh for the presentation of the operetta in the Gayety Thursday and Friday nights. The noted Yiddish composer will personally direct the orchestra. Molly Picon is star in the production, which played 20 consecutive weeks in the Second Avenue Theater, New York.

BOMBED, UNITES WITH GANG CHIEF FOR SAFETY

"SCARFACE AL" NEW PARTNER

International News Service.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Desperate over the alleged failure of established law to protect his interests, a prominent Chicago business man today was reported to have taken into partnership one Alphonse Capone, none other than the notorious "Scarface Al" of gangster fame.

Morris Becker, for 40 years a leading cleaner and dyer in Chicago, is the big business representative who has made a partner of Capone, according to G. L. Hostetter, secretary of the Employers' Association of Chicago.

Becker, according to Hostetter, has come to believe that fire must be fought with fire, and that "it takes a devil to kill a devil."

Becker explained, said Mr. Hostetter, that for 10 years his cleaning establishments have been bombed, his employes slugged and terrorized, and his business generally demoralized by gangsters and racketeers hired by unscrupulous competitors. And no one has ever been punished.

Forced to the conclusion that he could not expect protection from constituted authority, Becker is said to have conceived the idea of taking "Scarface Al," the powerful king of gangland, into partnership with him. Along with Capone is said to have come his mafia tribesmen, including Jack Guzik, a Capone cabinet member, who formerly had charge of Chicago's brothels.

Becker, who operates a chain of cleaning and dyeing establishments, told Hostetter, according to the latter, that everything has been quiet since the partnership was formed. Not a single threat nor the slightest suggestion of trouble has come to his attention since Scarceface Al joined his firm.

THOMPSON OUT FOR SENATOR

CLEVELAND, O., May 28.—(AP.)—Col. Carmi A. Thompson, of Cleveland, today formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Frank B. Willis.

Col. Thompson was at one time secretary to President Taft, and has been assistant secretary of the interior, member and speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives, Ohio secretary of state for two terms and personal representative of President Coolidge in an extensive survey of conditions in the Philippine Islands. In addition, he served as member of the advisory board to the American delegation of the disarmament conference at Washington in 1921.

WIDOW GRIEVES, DIES IN LEAP

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—(AP.)—A note, found in the room of the hotel from which Mrs. Bird B. Beasley, a widow, of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., leaped 11 floors to her death last night, directed that her body be buried at Harrisburg beside her husband.

The room from which the woman leaped was over that in which she spent her honeymoon four years ago. In the note, asking pardon of the management for her act, she declared that grief and ill fortune had followed the death of her husband on January 27 of last year.

The Days Are Getting Shorter

IN 1918 the length of the day changed suddenly from 1-650th of a second longer to 1-540th of a second shorter than the average, a shortening of 1-25,000,000th of its length.

Money Return of a Ewe

ISN'T it fun to go through an old album? Each page seems to be funnier than the last and my dear, the styles! Can you imagine that anyone could ever have thought they looked nice enough to have a picture taken in such a get-up "Look at this one! Isn't it priceless?" And you see Big Sister in all the glory of her frizzy hair and huge earrings and brooch. "Oh, look! Do you remember when she came home from college, and we were at the seashore? What a hat, and heavens, that high collar!"

And then the Gibson era! The scoop hat, the huge pompadour, the collar with bones way up back of the ears! How could she ever have stood it all! And her yachting outfit! Oh, dear, oh, dear! That hat! Them collar! Those hair!

"And this one! That's Grandmother in her "going away" dress. How prim! How could she stand that feather drooping so stiffly all around her face."

And they all thought they were beautiful! "And here am I, just a few years back. How could I ever have thought that I looked human! But I thought I was grand."

So it goes! What's fashionable today is funny, oh so funny tomorrow! So don't laugh, for some day, someone will be looking through an old album and see you as you look today and then—they'll do just what you are doing—laugh and wonder how you could ever have the nerve to look at anyone in such a queer rig.

An old album! What tales it tells of changing times and styles. It's funny, yes, but doesn't it sometimes give you a funny little catch in your throat and isn't your laughter tinged with tears?

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Tuesday, May 29

ACCORDING to the astral indices of this day those shall be rewarded whose ways have been those of fidelity, application, patience and hard work, especially in the employment of others or in public honors and personal pleasures for those who will not be carried away by excitements, impulse or contention.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of rewards, favors and preferments following the train of hard work, patience and loyalty, in the employment of others or in public service. Personal favors may also be bestowed, but be not carried into strife or contention by excitement or impulse.

A child born on this day should have splendid endowments for carrying it to favor and rich rewards for labor and service, but it should be given early discipline in self-control and amiability.

Meditations of a Married Woman

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE UNFAIR SEX

SUCCESS may be the modern girl's lodestar; but no amount of laurels will complete her happiness unless there are a few orange blossoms mixed in.

Where are all those sweet old-fashioned jokes about waiting for a woman to finish dressing? A woman has finished dressing, these days, almost before she begins.

"It" is that indescribable something in a woman's glance, voice or manner which can make a man forget that her coloring is pasty, that her mouth is too large, her knees don't match, and her name is "Huldy."

HELEN ROWLAND

Nothing so stirs up the spirit of '76 in a woman as a man's calm way of coming in two hours late for dinner and proceeding to deliver a beautiful homily on how to control the nerves and how to keep the food hot.

In these days, woman proposes, God disposes—and man reposes.

Man has been astonishingly just to woman, considering the example Nature has set him in being cruelly unjust to her from the start, by giving her a weaker body and a greater burden—a steadfast heart, and a mate with a wandering fancy.

A woman's neck curves naturally and imperceptibly from her chin to her shoulder, but, somehow, a man's neck always looks as though it had just been pasted on as an afterthought.

After a few years of married life a man grows so cautious that he won't even let the barber put scented tonic on his hair, for fear of rousing his wife's suspicions.

When a husband begins to widen out and grow a little bald on top he is almost as comfortable to take around with you to parties as an old umbrella that you know nobody will try to "snitch."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland, M.D.
U.S. Senator from New York

Don't Use the Stomach Like a Carpet Bag

NOT long ago the Librarian of Congress invited me to a luncheon. He had an interesting group about the table. Among the guests was Prof. W. E. Soothill, professor of Chinese at Oxford University, England.

DR. COPELAND

Prof. Soothill set us all laughing by reciting a little poem. It was a recital intended to warn Putnam's guests against overindulgence.

Here are the words:

Eat slowly; only men in rags,
  Or gluttons deep in sin,
Mistake themselves for carpet bags
  And tumble victuals in.

Funny, isn't it? It gave us a good laugh and in all probability increased our appetites in consequence.

The poem was written by Sir Walter Raleigh. Of course this is not the Sir Walter Raleigh, explorer, statesman, historian and poet, of Elizabeth's time. It is Sir Walter Raleigh, now professor of English at Oxford.

I trust you are not one of those who "mistake themselves for carpet bags and tumble victuals in." But if you are not, you are a rare person.

I truly believe the average individual eats too much. Many times I have said that you live on one-third of what you eat and the doctors live on the other two-thirds.

This statement is almost if not quite true, because most of us overeat and habitually overeat. I have no patience with folks who starve themselves for the sake of being slender. That is an evil worse, if anything, than sinful overeating. But everybody should be sensibly temperate in habits of eating.

It is surprising how much the intake of food can be reduced without the slightest decline in weight. This shows that the body does not use, but must get rid of, much of the material taken into the stomach. Useless and perhaps harmful demands are made on the digestive and eliminative organs by everyday excesses.

In addition, as Sir Walter suggests, to eat slowly is of great importance to health. Only tramps or gluttons deep in sin should gulp their food and treat the stomach as if it were a dump heap or a place to "tumble victuals in."

Much of the food we eat consists largely of starch. This must be converted into sugar before it can be utilized by the body. The first step in this conversion is the mixture with the starch of large quantities of saliva. This cannot be accomplished unless you eat slowly, thoroughly pulverizing the food.

I hope you will memorize this little poem. It should be recited at every meal.

Answers to Health Queries

R. Q.—What is the cause of a cataract? Is it dangerous? When can it be removed? Will it affect the other eye? What treatment is necessary?

A.—The cause is uncertain. No, except that it impairs the eyesight. It can be removed when it is "ripe," which time must be determined by an eye specialist.

N. Y. A. Q.—Do you advise a person going abroad to be vaccinated?

2.—What do you advise for preventing seasickness?

A.—Yes.

2.—Avoid overeating and all the other things making for indigestion.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Miss Inquisitive

DEAR MISS GALE:

Is a girl 18 years old old enough to fall seriously and everlastingly in love? What do you think of a man that would go with a girl six months, propose to her and then later for her to discover he is married, separated from his wife and has a son 16 months old?. That has been my experience. I fell rather hard for this man because he was fascinating, dressed neatly, was polite in every way, an interesting talker and a devoted lover. What more could a girl ask? It has been three months since we quit. Since then I met a young man a year younger than the former. He also dresses neatly and is an interesting talker. He, so far, has not attempted love making, but shows in every way that he is interested. I made sure he wasn't married before I let conditions drift. Now, the question is, could I ever be happy with a man like the latter when the former is forever in my mind. If the first was infatuation, then there is a big chance for the second, because I like him very well, but not in the same way as I did the first. The present suitor is not always making love and trying to kiss me; he seems to be perfectly satisfied if he can sit beside me and hold my hand. Should I let him do this? It seems I get as much of a kick out of it as he presumably does. It seems rather hard to find a fellow that will treat a girl the way she should be treated.

MISS INQUISITIVE.

The love of a girl of 18 may be real and it may not. She is too young to be perfectly sure and that is the reason I advise later marriages. The first man you mention is beneath notice and his "love" is not worth your consideration. The second man seems much the more desirable, as well as eligible, so keep his friendship.

Dorothy

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of your column and have come to you for advice. There is a boy, whom my girl friend and me both like very much. He shows the same amount of attention to both of us, but I really love him and want him to myself. Please tell me how I can be more attractive to him and win him from my friend. Neither one of us is hard to look at, and have many friends of both sexes, though I beat her with the girl friends for some reason. How can I attract the attention of another boy who is very young as myself. He tells different people he likes me, but when he speaks to me he never shows it. How can I make him confess his love for me?

DOROTHY.

Don't you think you are a bit selfish to want this boy's exclusive attention when you admit you like another boy, too? Be more generous, my dear.

A Fair Maid Meets Love In Strange Surroundings

Emily Is Offered Job, But Is Needed at Home; Her Father Is Dying

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and her flaming sister, Kitten, are daughters of a worker at the Rossiter factory. Emily, in high school, makes an ideal of Kent Rossiter and is greatly worried at her inability to mingle with the socially elect. Marty Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is attentive to Emily. He risks his life to gather some leaves for her and presents her with an Airedale. Emily forms a friendship with rich Mrs. Haiden, an interior decorator, who talks color and beauty to her and impresses upon her that the only aristocracy is that of work. Emily feels that her destiny is in her own hands. Day helps foment a strike. Emily persuades Mr. Rossiter to take him back as they are starving, but Day takes his good luck in the wrong spirit. Kent introduces her to his sister, who snubs her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"SAW you coming out, Em. Mind company? This makes me think of Como——" He told her about Italian moonlight on the loveliest lake in the world. Matter of fact his words were, but he had the gift of vividness; she saw him drifting on a night like this between the blue of the water and the blue of the sky; drifting lazily, lonesomely, while songs wafted from the shore.

"Saw you coming out, Em. Mind company? This makes me think of Como—" He told her about Italian moonlight on the loveliest lake in the world. Matter of fact his words were, but he had the gift of vividness; she saw him drifting on a night like this between the blue of the water and the blue of the sky; drifting lazily, lonesomely, while songs wafted from the shore.

"But you loved it, Kent?"

He settled down on the bench—moved so his shoulder touched hers. "I loved new places. It kept me back in school though; that's why I've got to work hard the next couple of years. You know I was going away, Emmy?"

Going away—yes. He would go away just as tonight with its beauty would vanishh. Gray dawn would come and gray days. She started to say, "I heard—" but the worlds would'nt pass her lips.

"Planning to study law," he went on. "Think that'd be pretty nice, Em? Granddad was a judge, you know; it's in the blood."

"Oh, in the blood! "Well—"

He looked at her, laughinng. "You don't believe in heredity? Many think it superstition. I suppose it isn't important one way or the other. We belong to ourselves, don't we?"

She sat there listening, a pale figure in her pale flounces with the silver light on her pale head. Delicate as a moonbeam she looked, all misty shadow; a vague presence some way aloof, exquisite as a prayer.

His hand went moving along the stone bench—gathered up her fingers in a warm, blithe pressure. He said, dreamily, "Didn't Bill Shakespeare write something about the floor of heaven inlaid with patines of bright gold? Never cared much for his stuff before. You kind of make a fellow think of things like that. . . Do you know you're the prettiest girl in Lyall?"

She turned toward him, feeling a sparkling quick wave of happiness. She tried to laugh, cover her embarrassment. But he had come close to her; he put his head down with his lips pressed together; there was no smile in his eyes.

"Prettiest and sweetest, Emily. I wish—well—"

She wanted to hear what he wished. This boy so fine, so lovable, sitting here beside her. That he wasn't going away, perhaps? If he could tell her that! She moved her fingers in his hand, felt herself caught in a passion of waiting.

But he leaned back, still watching her, and began to sing their class-day song:

"Oh moon of my delight that knows no wane,
The moon of heaven is rising
once again—"

Vibrant and soft his voice was; very tender, touched with longing. His farewell to her, she thought it; to their school days together. Tears kept running into her eye yet it seemed her heart was a chalice held out to fill with sweetness.

The song ended in a mystery of regret and she got up suddenly, wishing to go now while this was so vividly hers.

They walked to the edge of the cliff and stood looking out on the broad river. The night boat was going up to Albany; it seemed a fairy thing, all slender whiteness with its rows of lighted windows.

Suddenly the yellow squares were obscured for a moment as a yacht came swinging down the river very jauntily, moving fast. As the two come abreast a deep-throated call went out from the ship; it was answered by a quick, merry blast like a shout of laughter from the yacht. They drew apart rapidly and went on, losing themselves in the dark.

Emily whispered, "Ships that pass—"

"But they'll meet again. The world's pretty narrow after all; and these travel the same waters, Emily—"

He held her arms then exactly as he had done that day when they were childrer and he called her into the "postoffice."

"You're going now? This is goodby? Beautiful Emmy—"

She raised her face then and he kissed her.

When school was out Frances Haiden offered Emily a job.

"Not so much of a place, my dear, but you'd be learning. You still wish to teach Latin? A dry job, that. But a bit of interior decorating comes in handy if you're doing no more than hanging dining room curtains. And you like it here."

"Of course, dear Frances. I love it. Well, ask mother—"

But Agnes felt she couldn't let Emily go. Steve was no better; he had, in fact, moved from the couch to his bed in the little south room upstairs and now, in addition to her housework Agnes had to be nurse.

Kitten was little help. She would undertake chores willingly enough but long before they were finished she would be out and away sitting with Dottie Brent under the hedge where once Emily and Stella dreamed of romance. Or she would begin something and slyly draw her sister into it, leaving it to her to finish.

In the meantime Agnes was growing meeker and more gray and the veins in her hands more than ever like knotted ropes. And much as she needed the small wage Emily would be able to bring home, she needed her help more.

So throughout the summer Emily was a combination housemaid and nurse. The storms always gathering around Kitten were wearing. But Steve had dropped his bitterness and was strangely tracticable. She spent many hours by his bedside, reading aloud to him or talking hopefully about the day when he should be well again and go back to Rossiter's.

But that day never came.

CHAPTER IX.

IN the last week of August Steven Day died.

A dewy green morning it was, aflare with the fullness of summer, yet holding a vague wistfulness, hint of coming fall. Always afterward that wistfulness meant to Emily a thing that could smile with blind eyes.

Almost overnight a rainbow had laid itself across the back yard. These were the dahlias Steve planted every year and tended with a fervor of pride. They were the one beautiful thing in which he felt an interest. This year mily had done it all for him; under his direction.

Poverty and Homesickness In Switzerland--Refuge in A Printing Office

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

In the Opening Chapter of the Intimate Story of Mussolini In The Sunday Sun-Telegraph Yesterday, the Tempestuous Boyhood of the Coming "Strong Men of Italy" Was Traced. He Was a Lively Boy, But Given to Day Dreaming, and the Visions Conjured in His Brain Often Were Daring.

CHAPTER III.

TO SEE THE WORLD—SWITZERLAND AND HOMESICKNESS—POVERTY AND HUNGER—A BEGGAR AND A TRAMP.

BUT this rebellious student and teacher hated the cramped, confining atmosphere of schools. And so, one fine day in 1902, yielding to his restless wanderlust, he packed up his few belongs, boarded a train without even saying good-bye to his friends, and left the country.

BENITO MUSSOLINI

He wanted to observe, study, work, turn the world upside down; he didn't know exactly what he wanted. He was simply out to breathe the bracing air of freedom.

When he reached Chiasso, while waiting for the train that was to take him to French Switzerland, he bought a copy of the Milan "Secolo" and read, to his grief and astonishment, that his father had been arrested. The Predappio Socialists, in an effort to prevent the victory of the Clericals, had smashed the ballot-bores. The authorities, had arrested several of the ringleaders, Alessandro Mussolini among them.

Benito hestitated, torn between conflicting desires to proceed and to return home. He finally decided to continue his journey, though he had but two lire and 20 centimes in his pocket.

An Exile's Job

His first experiences as an exile are graphically recounted in a letter which he wrote to a friend:

"....and so I boarded the train that was to take me to Lucerne. a 12-hours trip. The coach was full of Italians, fellow-exiles. I spent almost the entire time at the window. It was a splendid night, with the moon rising among silvery stars, behind lofty mountains that were white with snow. The Lake of Lugano gleamed with magic reflections, like a smooth metallic surface struck by fairy lights. Mount Gotthard was like a thoughtful, kindly giant, making a way for the steel serpent that was swiftly bearing me away to another land.

"Everybody slept in the coach. I alone sat thinking. What was I thinking of on that night that marked the dividing line between two periods of my life? I don't remember. In the morning, as we entered German Switzerland, and a dreary November rain coldly greeted us, I recalled the green meadows of Italy, kissed by the fiery rays of the southern sun, and an pang of weariness and homesickness shot through my heart.

"At Lucerne I changed trains for Yverdon. When I got there, tired and dazed, I turned my steps toward a miserable tavern where for the first time, I had occasion to make use of the French I had learned in school.

"The following day I found a job as a bricklayer's assistant: 11 hours of work a day, 32 centimes an hour. I made 121 trips with a load of bricks to the second story of a house under construction. That night the muscles of my arms were so swollen and sore that I could barely touch them. I ate some potatoes roasted in the ashes and threw myself, dressed as I was, upon my bed, a heap of straw. At 5 in the morning I got up and went back to work. I quivered with impotent anger. The sight of the boss, with his fat, smug, self-satisfied face, gave me hydrophobia. On the third day he said to me: 'You're too well-dressed.' He meant that to be significant. I felt like rebelling and breaking the head of that newly-rich peasant who accused me of being lazy while my bones were cracking under the strain. But what if I had done it. The employer is always in the right.

"When the end of the week came, I told the boss that I was going to leave and wanted my pay. He went into his office while I waited outside on the landing. When he came out he angerily thrust 20-odd francs into my hand and snarled: 'Here you are, it's stolen money!' I was too dumbfounded to reply. What should I have done. Killed him? As a matter of fact, I turned away in silence. I was hungry and barefooted. A pair of almost new shoes that I had brought with me had been torn to shreds on the rocks and bricks that had cut their way into my hands, my feet and my soul. I hurried off to an Italian store-keeper and brought a pair of hobnailed shoes. The next morning I left for Lausanne.

Ready to Cry

He reached Lausanne without a penny in his pocket. All day long he sought work in vain. Night came on, and still he was unemployed. He was hungry.

It is only when one is in a strange country, far from home, alone, penniless and homesick, that one realizes how much strength of character it takes to refrain from bursting into tears like a child.

Mussolini trudged on silently and sullenly, along a deserted road. Suddenly, as in a fairy tale, he saw a light ahead of him. He drew near. It was a modest kitchen lamp that shed its beams upon a tranquil domestic scene. In a farmyard, half concealed in darkness, around a dining table, sat some men, some children and a woman. It was a temptation for a heart filled with weariness and sullen anger, and for a stomach that had long been empty. Mussolini never resists temptations because, he says, they are too feminine. He yielded. Without humility or rudeness, resolute and clear-eyed, he entered the quiet farmyard and thrust his brigand-like eyes and dusty face into the candor of that domestic picture. Silence greeted him. Half a dozen pairs of astonished eyes were turned upon him.

"Have you some bread?" he frankly inquired.

There was no reply. Then a hand

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP.)—The nomination of Patrick J. Farrell, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commerce was ordered favorably reported today by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. The vote was unanimous, after half an hour's examination of Mr. Farrell in executive session.

Farrell, a Democrat, is now general counsel of the commission.

Chairman Watson, of the committee, said Farrell had created a very favorable impression on committee members. He expressed doubt, however, as to whether the Senate would confirm the nomination without a fight.

Uniforms for Dry Highway Patrols

By ROBT. S. THORNBURGH.
Staff Correspondent, International News Service

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Prohibition agents patroling public highways will be equipped with distinctive uniforms, Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran announced today.

This important step, long-advocated in Congress, is a supreme effort to prevent unnecessary killings that have taken place as the result of agents stopping automobiles on the roads.

Doran declared that it is only natural that automobilists halted at night or on lonely highways, by un-uniformed men, frequently of rough appearance because of hard duty of long days in the field, become suspicious and make an effort to escape.

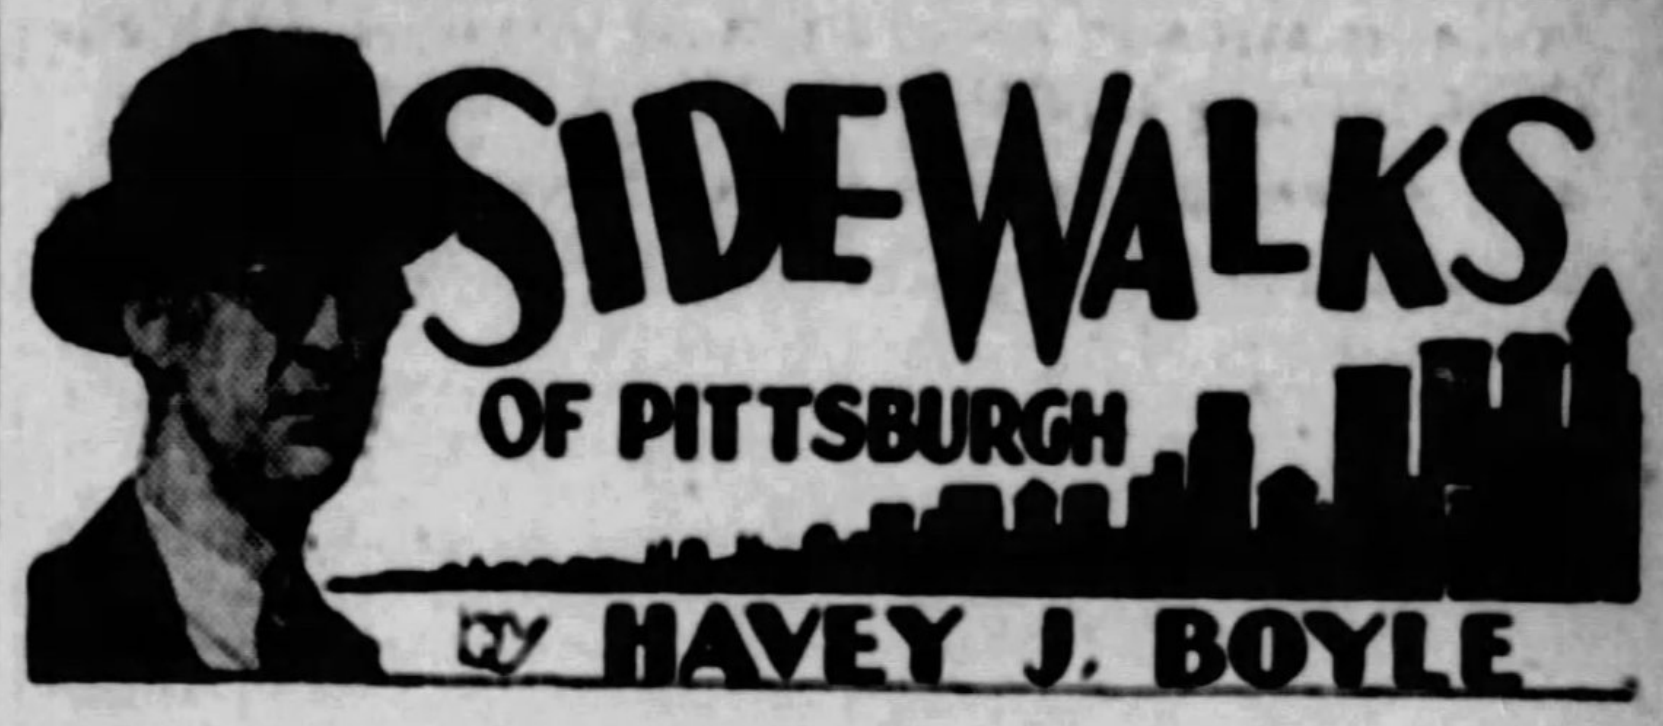
2 OF 6 MISSING WOMEN BACK

Of six women who disappeared from homes over the week-end, two have returned and the police are searching for the others. Dolores Scheetz, 13, of 1436 Nixon street, and her chum, Martha Huebster, 11, of 1144 East Ohio street, sailed forth in knickers yesterday on a hike to the great open spaces. Their relatives were alarmed but after a few hours the hikers returned tired and hungry.

Mrs. Mary Foster, 20, left her home at 5925 Broad street, Friday with $50 of her husband's money, it was reported to the police. Frank Foster, the husband, says he cannot account for the woman's act. She left their son, Robert, aged 4.

A man is sought in connection with the disappearance of Violet Alexander, 16, and Edna Hershman, 20, both of East Middleborough, Washington county. They left yesterday in an automobile with a man who resides in the town and none had returned early today.

Mrs. Margaret McCullough, 45, of Broadhead street, also is sought by her relatives. It was reported that she wandered away from home yesterday and is thought to have lost her way and is cared for by friends.



SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

By HAVEY J. BOYLE

AS AN outsider who hasn't seen a ball game since the opening day of the season we are interested in the vague rumblings that the Pirates have been cutting up—that is to say some of the boys have been taking a nip. A report that some of the players take a drink never fails to interest. The report nearly always comes, long experience in such matters leads us to believe, in the midst of a losing streak. Nearly always in a winning streak it is supposed that the players have gone in for teetotalism. It is only when they lost that someone does some surmising about the alcoholic content of the team.

Now the truth of the matter is that the boys average the same alcoholic content in winning and losing streaks.

If we believe that drinking has thrown the local boys into a losing spell we must assume that the other teams who beat the Pirates have suddenly gone dry. Such an assumption, of course, would be absurd, for, believe it or not, it is not at all unusual for a member of the Pirates to take a drink with a member of the opposing club.

I CAN TELL YOU WHY THE PIRATES ARE LOSING BALL GAMES
SO ?

If there was anything important in the current theory about the Pirates cutting high-jinks then a most amazing result would occur in baseball—neither side would win, for both sides do some drinking, and both sides, from time to time, cut high-jinks, the most of which, considering their sturdy constitutions, their outdoor life, and the nature of their work, are closer to being harmless than being harmful.

Among the ball players we have known only two or three would gain admittance to a Hard-Drinking club. Most of the others are collegiate—you know, a few drinks and then for three loud whoopees and a locomotive yell.

A BALL PLAYER'S drinking gets an advertisement so widespread we often have wondered why they ever take a drink beyond the confines of their boudoirs. Here is what happens:

A ball player and a colleague enter a giggling water place and call for a quiet drink. They no sooner have their glasses hoisted than Mr. A, who is a rabid fan, approaches them, and begins a sort of hero-worshipping conversation.

"Have a drink," says Mr. A.

"No, thanks," say the players.

"Aw, come on now, have a drink," pleads Mr. A.

The players, then, take one more drink.

Sometime the next afternoon they hear that Mr. A has told two parties, the Democratic and the Republican, that he made whoopee all night with two Pirate ball players.

Considering the constant temptation, ball players rate high in temperance. The latch key is out for them in so many places, and bundles are tendered them by admiring hands so frequently, that it is a wonder the personnel of the national game manages to keep from becoming topers.

STYLES in drinking in baseball have undergone the same change as they have undergone elsewhere. In the dark ages of the game beer was the real stuff, and the player who called for his liquor raw was considered a little beyond the pale. But when beer became scarce the players, like other persons who took a draught from time to time, turned to whisky. The high-ball is the most popular drink in baseball, but, lacking the charged water or ginger ale, one straight down the middle is handled with greater dexterity than before.

The most notorious drinker in baseball is a pitcher (not a local player) but so great is his record that other managers might ask as Lincoln asked when a complaint was made about Grant's alleged imbibing: "I'd like to get some of the same stuff to give to my other generals," or words to that effect,

THE expression "the game's not worth the candle" arose when candles were expensive and card-playing for money was prevalent. Small stakes meant that the illumination came to more than possible winnings.

Bob Tries to Discover Which Of the Chinamen Is to Be the Murderer

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley, once a dashing sea-faring adventurer, is picked up in a fragile craft by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Mute evidence on the body testifies to the fact that the man died in a struggle. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives the various articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after thirty years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. Hidden in the hold of the ship he overhears five Chinamen plotting. There is great danger of the boat going on the reefs and Bob is afraid.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

BOB KINGSLEY halted abruptly. It was rather queer that his mind should have swung around to that again, wasn't it? The Chinamen, and the two white gods, and retribution for the murder of his uncle, were all rather insignificant now, weren't they, in view of the fact that the chances were a lot better than even that the Baalu Reef would very definitely and very miserably put an end to all that and everything else before daybreak?

Why, then, should these things intrude themselves at such a time as this? From boyhood he had sailed the seas, and there was no delusion in his mind as to the imminent peril in which the Monotah stood. If the ship couldn't win her way free, and the boats were lowered before she struck, the boats would merely be driven on the reefs and smashed to matchwood—and there was little better chance after the Monotah struck. The Baalu wasn't one reef—it was many reefs. And in between the reefs with the water boiling and seething like some hell's cauldron, there was little likelihood that any boat could live. In the most literal sense of the term, then, he and everyone else on board were facing death, which, if it came, would not be long delayed. And yet his mind reverted to other matters, and he seemed to be almost unmoved. Why was it? Was he a superman who did not fear death, who was even callous and indifferent to it? He shook his head. He was normal enough in that respect surely! He could not say that he was unafraid of death any more than any other man could—and certainly he had no desire to die. Well, then—what? There was nothing, no single thing he could do to avert the calamity if calamity there was to be, everything that could be done was being done by the ship's officers and crew—but one didn't go into a blue funk over it in the meantime, did one? No earthly use in that! A faint smile twisted at his lips. Strange selfanalysis!

Why not those Chinamen, then? There might be no disaster, and he might have the luck to block their filthy game on his own—in which case some poor devil would see the sun rise again after all! A new thought flashed through his mind. Perhaps he might enlist some help other than that of the ship's personnel until such time as either the Chinamen, their proposed victim, himself, and everybody else were beyond help of any kind, or until the Monotah had won through and Captain Karler could take a hand in the game. No—that wouldn't do. There wasn't anybody. There were only three first-class passengers besides himself and including Verna Lyle. The girl was naturally out of it. And of the two male passengers, one was a fussy little old gentleman near seventy who would have been terrified out of his wits at the bare hint of a possible fracas; the other was a chap of polyglot tongue and of God knew what nationality, who came from Java and was ponderously fat—and almost to a certainty at the moment ponderously drunk. The man's consumption of gin and bitters had been enormous and relentless. Between his fat and his gin an exit or entrance through his stateroom door was at all times a feat. The native passengers he, Bob Kingsley, did not for an instant consider—to secure any of them as allies with his limited vocabulary and their several languages was hopeless—it would take him half the night to explain what he wanted, and even then he had but slight assurance that any of them would be willing to meddle in any affair where there was a chance of having a knife stuck into their own skins!

All right, then! The chances were five to one—five against one that he would be able to pick out and keep his eye on the lottery-drawn executioner rather than on one of the other four. But the odds were not of his making—he could only accept them. And he would!

CHAPTER XVI.

THE ship was more noisy now; the flow of orders from the bridge; the answers from the lower decks; the serang's voice, haltingly in broken English or voluble in his native tongue, much in evidence—a constant succession of weird bellowings against the wind. And outboard to leeward, even in the short time that had elapsed since last he had looked in that direction, the spume line that marked the outer reefs seemed to have drawn nearer. The ship, as yet, was showing no canvas.

From the boat deck he could see, with limitations, both fore and aft. Figures, queer little shapes that, distorted by the darkness, might have been monkeys, were crawling about in the rigging; while along the decks or near the masts other figures constantly ran and squirmed and wriggled. There was commotion enough now!

Bob Kingsley swung his way down the companionway to the main deck. It was no sinecure this, getting a bit of cloth on masts that were never meant for anything but cargo booms—and not much of a spread after it was set! The Lord knew what the Monotah carried in the shape of canvas in her stores!

But that was apart for the moment now, wasn't it? Would he elect to play the forward or the after deck? It was a gamble—almost like tossing his stakes on the "red" or "black" of a roulette wheel! There were three Chinamen forward, and two aft. He couldn't be in both places at once. Better keep his eyes on the three—and pray to Heaven it wasn't one of the other two who had drawn the fatal stick!

He made no effort to conceal his presence as he reached the lower deck. No one, not even the Chinamen, would credit him with being there for any ulterior purpose now—everybody was watching the Malay sailors at work, and he was instantly conscious that a sense of disquiet and uneasiness pervaded the whole deck. The native passengers were huddled here and there in little groups—obviously sensitive to the fact that something unnatural was taking place, that something was wrong. And in them fear was dawning. A child whimpered. The Malay sailors shouted at each other. Some cockatoos, their rest disturbed, screamed anxiously. And there were pigs that, from their crates, grunted discordantly. The silence of the engines was eerie. There was some sail showing now—but it was an inadequate, pitiful bit of a rag!

His lips tightened suddenly, grimly. He had seen all this—but he had not seen one of the three Chinamen who should be here. The deck, however, was only dimply lighted—in spots almost in complete darkness—and it was quite possible that they were somewhere about, even though he had been unable to see them from where he stood.

He made a circuit of the deck—casually. There was no sign of any of them. Again he went around the deck, this time allowing not an inch of it to escape him. They were not there. Queer! Only one man had been chosen—or had he been wrong on that point, jumped to conclusions? Or were they merely hiding somewhere near the spot, wherever that might be on the ship, that had been selected for their fiendish work, and were holding themselves in readiness to assist the actual murderer if any assistance should prove to be necessary? In any case, their absence had an ugly look about it! They were evidently already at work, or they would not otherwise have disappeared so mysteriously. He would not have been surprised to have found one of them missing—but not all of them! If he was to accomplish anything, and if, indeed, he was not even now too late, they would have to be found without an instant's loss of time.

He turned and went swiftly back along the deck, making for the store-room in the alleyway that had served the five Chinamen for their secret meetings. It would be a bit of luck if they were there! He might be able to pen them up—fasten the door somehow so that they could not get out. That would take care of them until Captain Karler could, if all went well, devote some attention to them—or until he, Bob Kingsley, if the worst happened to the Monotah, released them so that, little as they might deserve it, they would not drown like rats in a trap. Anyway, the alleyway led right through to the lower after deck, and, failing the storeroom, the after deck was the next logical place where he might expect to find them.

His hand was in his jacket pocket, his finger snuggling around the butt of his revolver, as he stepped into the alleyway. No—no luck here! The storeroom door was wide open. There was even a light inside. The place was in utter disorder—two of the Malay crew were still apparently ransacking it for sailcloth, or possibly cordage, stores of some kind anyhow—but there was no one else in the room.

As swiftly as the heavy rolling of the ship would permit, Bob Kingsley ran, then, along the alleyway and emerged on the after deck. There were not so many native passengers here as there were forward, but there seemed to be more excitement and unrest—as though, even in the almost negligible space of time that had elapsed since he had left the forward deck, the sense of impending disaster had grown more acute. There was a drear, uncanny sound here noticeable over the ship's noises that he had not heard before, a low wailing, continuous, rising and falling—the native women at least were obviously losing their grip. Bad—that! Not a pleasant sight here either—any of it! Some fowls had broken loose and were fluttering and careening insanely around the deck. A rice pot, overturned, had made a slippery mess. Some of the crew were trimming their so-called sail. The second officer barked his orders. An earthenware jar of water sloshed its way across the deck with the roll of the ship and bumped into the legs of a closely huddled knot of natives. No one paid any attention to it.

Young Jackson Intensely Interested in Learning What Madge Knows of Eleanor

I WAS so astounded by young Mr. Jackson's excited queries as to Eleanor Lincoln's plans to become an actress under Philip Veritzen's direction, that I had no words with which to answer him. That he guessed the reason for my astonishment, I knew when he spoke again.

"Of course you think I am—what you call—crazy," he said, apparently treading through the mazes of English as he fancied it was spoken in America. As he spoke he turned a corner into a wood road and drew up the car under the shade of an immense tree.

"Now we can talk," he went on with an engaging smile, without danger of being killed. I really am too excited to drive and talk, too."

I silently agreed with him, for he patently was greatly excited. And when he released his hand from the wheel I saw that it was shaking.

"Of course you are wondering what business it is of mine what Miss Lincoln does," he said, and stopped, looking at me searchingly.

Some lurking spirit of mischief prompted my answer.

"Unless, perhaps, you are engaged to the young woman," I said demurely. "That would account for your excitement upon the subject of her proposed theatrical career."

He gave me another intent look and then laughed, but with a note of ruefulness in his mirth.

"I see that you are spoofing me," he said. "I surely would be—what you say—a 'hurry-up worker'—to get engaged to Miss Lincoln in so short a time since I have met her. No, I can assure you I am not engaged to Miss Lincoln, nor have I now any desire to be."

Unconsciously he had emphasized the "now." I took fast hold of my courage and said softly:

"Not 'now,' perhaps, but—how long ago did you give up that desire? Days? Weeks? Months? Years, perhaps?"

He gave me a quick startled look, and then there was a long minute of silence. Then he raised his hand with a decisive gesture.

"So—you know—" he said.

"That you and Miss Lincoln are not strangers, yes," I said.

"Has she told you?" he asked tensely. "How much do you know?"

For an instant I dallied with temptation. I saw clearly that in the young man's excitement I had only to pretend that Eleanor Lincoln had given me her confidence, and I would have the solution of the mystery surrounding her. But the decent instincts of my birth and training rushed to my aid, and I spoke quickly, decisively.

"She has told me nothing," I said truthfully. "Nor do I 'know' anything. But it did not take very keen observation upon those two encounters of ours to see that you and she were old acquaintances, that the dog Fedor belonged to her, and that for some reason you were taking care of it for her."

"Who else knows this?" he asked quickly, and I guessed that his thoughts had flown to Mary.

"As I told you, no one 'knows' anything," I answered, sparring for time. "And as for guesses upon the part of other people, you must question them. I can only tell you my own reaction to Miss Lincoln's behavior when she caught sight of you and Fedor that day at the station."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Pittsburghers Look to Sewickley Valley and Heights as Ideal Mecca for Summer Resort

UNLESS I am badly mistaken, Sewickley is going to be one of Pittsburgh's favorite "summer resorts" this year. There is no denying the fact that the Valley and the Heights are just about as attractive in summer as one could wish. You know, don't you, that Sewickley Heights is considered one of the most beautiful spots in the eastern part of the country, with its winding drives leading through perfectly kept grounds and gardens to homes that are show places in themselves.

I have heard al lsorts of rumors concerning the number of folks who are deserting the city for the Valley, either for just the summer or to live there al lthe year around. Some have already taken houses down there, and others are planning to go shortly. Just for instance, the junior William Larimer Joneses have closed their Fifth avenue house and will be at Edgeworth all summer.

And speaking of Sewickley reminds me that Mrs. Lewis A. Park, of the Heights—Frances Schoen "that was"—went down to Louisville, Ky., for the wedding of Mary Park Kaye and John E. Tarrant, which took place on Saturday afternoon. And Margaret Wright Stewart, daughter of the William Lincoln Stewarts, of Aylesboro avenue, who is a cousin of the bride, was a member of the bridal party, I understand.

Lots of our local people are just preparing to take trips abroad, and some are just getting back. Among the latter are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Flaccus and their daughter, Jane. They have been traveling in Europe for some time and they expect to land in New York tomorrow. Mrs. Flaccus' mother, Mrs. George W. Bliss, of Shady avenue, went on to New York last night, I understand, to meet them. And, by the way, Bliss Flaccus, their son, is coming on from Culver to ride in the Sewickley horse show next week.

No less than six girls who are going to be married shortly were entertained on Saturday afternoon, when Mrs. James C. Patch, of Bellefield avenue, gave a bridge-luncheon in her home. Mrs. Patch gave the party for her niece, Eleanor Vail Lewis, of Devon road, who is going to marry Dr. George F. Poster on June 5, and five of Eleanor's friends shared honors with her. They were Lida Brickell Repp, who is engaged to Dr. Edward Harper Rynearson; Mildred Griffith, whose engagement to Jack Wible Lyon, of Sewickley, was announced last fall; Louise Graham, who will marry Earle Alfred Brown at a wedding on June 23; Pauline Page, who is the fiancee of Leslie Stockton Howell, of Haverford, Pa.; and Margaret Constans, who will be married next month to John Alexander Robinson, of Chicago.

June 6 is the day chosen for the annual flower market of the Civic Club, I understand, and it will be conducted in the North Side city square. Mrs. Franklin T. Nevin is chairman of the plant committee, with Mrs. A. B. Harlow and Miss Elizabeth Hays as vice chairmen. The committee includes Mrs. W. H. R. Hilliard, Miss Lucy Haworth, Mrs. J. Denniston Lyon, Mrs. William Penn Snyder, Mrs. Edward A. Woods, Miss Isabel Adams, Mrs. John Joy Edson, Mrs. William Scott, Mrs. Henry R. Rea, Mrs William Thaw, Jr, Mrs. James W. Arrott III, Mrs. Gerald Firth, Miss Dorothy Slack, Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Mrs. Wilson A. Campbell, Mrs. Henry O. Gilchrist, Mrs. Marcus Stoner, Miss Ethel Christy, Mrs. Frank Darlington, Mrs. James Oliver, Mrs Thomas Wurts, Mrs. William W. Collin, Jr., Mrs. J. Frederic Byers and Mrs. Charles Jones.

Mrs. James H. Laughlin, of Devonshire street, is at the Barclay, in New York, I hear. She expects to remain for a few days.

The marriage of Miss Frances Jane Elder, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James F. Elder, of Youngstown, O., and Richard Clark Lippincott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Lippincott, of Baum boulevard, was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Youngstown, by the Rev. Henry White. Miss Rae Elder was her sister's maid of honor, and Lawrence Lippincott was his brother's best man. Herbert Mumaw and J. Finley Smith were the ushers, and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Frank B. Horn.

The Pittsburgh Alumnae Chapter of the Zeta Tau Alpha fraternity will entertain seniors of the University of Pittsburgh belonging to Chi chapter Saturday, June 9, with a bridge luncheon in the Congress clubhouse. Mrs. Lillie Reed McMasters is in charge.

Miss Melva Chillcott, daughter of Mrs. David Chillcott, of Gass avenue, North Side, has chosen Thursday, June 21, as the date for her marriage to Calvin William Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Wallace, of the North Side. The ceremony will be performed at 6:30 o'clock, in the bride's home by the Rev. Dr. S. J. Glass, pastor of the McClure Avenue Presbyterian Church. Miss Loretta Chillcott will be her sister's maid of honor and Lamont Wallace is to be his brother's best man.

Miss Dorothy Esther Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtin Meade Wilson, of South Atlantic avenue, has chosen June 23 as the date for her marriage to Frederick William Stahl, of Severna Park, Md.

The wedding of Mrs. Hilda Reiber Frank, of Carrick, and Sylvester Rhodes Willock, of Cleveland, took place Saturday night [illegible] o'clock in the First English Lutheran Church, Grant street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. A. Holl, pastor. There were no attendants, and after the ceremony a dinner for the families was served in the bride's home. After a trip to Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Willock will be at home in Wade Park Manor, Cleveland.

Mrs. H. Powell, of Jackson street, and Miss Etta Kline, of Louisville, Ky., have left to spend several weeks in Atlantic City.

Charles C. Sheppard, of Darlington road, will give his annual dinner for the Asbury Chi Kappa Society tomorrow night in the Union Club. The society is made up of students of Tech and Pitt. Covers will be laid for 20 and the toastmaster with be Franklin A. West. The Rev. Dr. Ralph W. McKenzie will be the speaker.

* * *

The marriage of Miss Mary Regina Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Wilson, of Malvern avenue, and Cletus Oliver Gilson, of this city, was solemnized this morning at 10 o'clock in St. Paul's Cathedral by the Rev. Vincent Burke. The bride wore cream chiffon with a hat to match, and her corsage was of orchids. Her sister, Mrs. Walter Griscom, as matron of honor, appeared in red chiffon with a black hat, and her flowers were yellow roses. George Flotzinger was Mr. Gilson's best man. A breakfast for the immediate families followed the ceremony in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. Mr. and Mrs. Gilson have left for a short eastern trip and after June 10 will be at home in Ridgeville street, Squirrel Hill.

The midweek dinner dance at the Pittsburgh Country Club has been changed from Thursday to Wednesday this week because of Memorial Day. There will also be a special golf luncheon on Wednesday.

ly appointed, was held at the filtration plant of the Pennsylvania Water Company in Penn township, with more than 150 women present, these including the good-looking Wilkinsburg juniors. The doxology was sung in assembly as an invocation and there was also club singing of songs written for the occasion, Paul Moore leading the voices. The high school orchestra furnished the accompaniments and also played during luncheon.

Joseph T. Miller welcomed the women and spoke on the metropolitan plan for Allegheny county, and then W. C. Hawley, general superintendent, explained the system of filtration, giving some amazing and interesting figures and later conducting the entire party through the works. But the chief entertainment of the afternoon was the program by the women themselves. This comprised everything from historical sketches and bits of pageantry to stunts and rhymes. Mrs. Samuel Hamilton and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, wrote the verse which accompanied the most pretentious pageant of the afternoon, that for Pennsylvania. What was perhaps the most novel and colorful was done by Mrs. George M. Eaton and a group of assistants and represented California history as a scene on a movie lot. Iowa's three daughters, led by Mrs. W. C. Graham, did a clever bit, too, and Mrs. Q. W. Hershey and her aides in costume portrayed several events in New York's early days. Ohio's was a clever questionnaire, with Mrs. John T. Parsons leading, while Mrs. Hawley and an assisting group closed the program with Kansas. Miss Helen Pershing was director, and Mrs. Albert L. Vencill, president-elect, voiced the club's appreciation to the hosts.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

THIS week's family party, to which radio listeners are invited by the Chevrolet division of General Motors, will feature Richard Rodgers, modern composer-pianist. He will be heard in some of his own compositions during the broadcast from Red Network stations, including WCAE, tonight at 9:30 o'clock. Mr. Rodgers is the composer of the music of such successes as "She's My Baby," "Peggy Ann," "Dearest Enemy," "The Girl Friend" and "A Connecticut Yankee." The assisting artists will be Lewis James, tenor; a soprano soloist and the complete concert band, directed by Edwin Franko Goldman. Dance selections and novelty orchestrations will be presented by a second group, under the direction of Roderick Graham.

Paula Hemminghaus, contralto, the Maid of the Moon, will sing Paladihle's "Psyche" during the Moon Magic program, which will be broadcast by KDKA and other Blue Network stations at 10 o'clock. Miss Hemminghaus' other numbers will include Massenet's "Twilight," and "Auf Dem Wasser zu Singen" (song to be sung on the water), by Schubert. The di Stefano Trio, a string group, will play del Riego's "Thank God for a Garden," "Melodie," by Nilson, arranged by Fysher; Thelam's "En Sourdine," and Ethelbert Nevin's "Love Song."

Jimmy Farrell, the American golf professional, will give the second in his series of talks on golf in the Spur Tie Beaus program to be heard at 9 o'clock over the Columbia chain, including WJAS. There will be music by a dance orchestra.

At 9:30 o'clock, over the same stations, a new feature, Come to the Fair, will receive its initial "airing." This program, which is to be presented by a large symphony orchestra, vocal groups and soloists, will offer the song and dance tunes one hears at the fairs held in various parts of the world.

The Buccaneers at 10:30 will conclude the night's Columbia broadcasting with a special Memorial Day program.

AL SPINK SUCCUMBS

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

THE slump of the Pirates has not tended in any way to make the club officials regret they landed Burleigh Grimes in their one big deal of the winter. Grimes has been available for slab duty since the bell sounded — he not only takes his turn on the mound, but hustles to the bullpen on other afternoons when his mates seemed to be in distress.

BURLEIGH has been the one consistent worker for the Buccos. Naturally of a rugged nature, Grimes lives in the woods in the winter months. Consequently, when the various weather changes hit him he comes out with the glow of health and ready for fights or frolics.

THE spitball star pitched a full game on Thursday. On Saturday he rushed to the bullpen and warmed up when it appeared as if the Pirates might start a rally that would put them in the game. He's due to pitch tomorrow and if they need him the following day, he'll be on edge to go.

IF Kremer, Hill, Meadows and Miljus were able to show like they did in 1927, the Pirates would not need many weeks to get right into the thick of the race. But as pitching is the dominating element in the sport it stands to reason that the club would be seriously handicapped without good service from the four aces mentioned.

CARMEN HILL looked like his best self in his recent game in Cincinnati. But he was in bad shape at the conclusion of the 13-inning scrap. The Corry Giant had the game almost won, a base hit with two out in the ninth tying up the game. The Buccos had the worst end of the "breaks" in the feverish series with the Reds.

NATURALLY Bush is anxiously awaiting the return to health and form of his veteran right-handers. The Cubs and Reds are winning consistently because each club has a flock of pitchers ready. Give Bush and the Pirates the same advantage and they'll show you something.

SPEAKING of pitchers, you probably will be interested to know that Emil Yde is pitching clever ball for the Indianapolis club of the American Association. Emil and Roy Spencer form a high-class battery for the Hoosiers. On Saturday Yde stopped the long winning streak of Casey Stengel's Toledo Mudhens.

HOW BASEBALL'S STARS TWINKLED YESTERDAY

Ty Cobb—Failed to hit safely in four trips.

Tris Speaker—Got a sacrifice and walk in four trips.

Harry Heilmann—Hitless in three times up.

Paul Waner—Four times up, no hits.

Rogers Hornsby — First game: Doubled once in two times up and scored one run. Second game—Singled twice in four times up.

Kiki Cuyler—Out of lineup.

Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig were idle.

LATE DR. PENMAN FORMER GROVER STAR

GROVE CITY, Pa., May 28.—Dr. Robert (Bob) Penman, former University of Pittsburgh athlete, for whom funeral services were held this morning in Erie, where he died on Friday, was born and reared here and starred at Grove City High School and Grove City College before entering Pitt. He earned his letter in football, baseball and basketball and starred as a pitcher. He played at Pitt in the early days of the Pop Warner regime. A widow and young son survive him.

TWO ENTER BUTLER RACE

BUTLER, Pa., May 28.—Lou Hornetta, American aviation ace in the World War, and Jack Reed, his team-mate in automobile racing circles, will seek speed honors and the $1,000 in prizes for their home city of New Kensington in the 100-mile automobile race to be carried on at the fairgrounds in this city Decoration Day afternoon, commencing at 3 o'clock daylight savings time.

Pyle Says Cash Ready

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP.)—C. C. Pyle's transcontinental footracers have reached the end of the rainbow, but whether the expected pot of gold will be their rewards remains to be seen.

One hundred and ninety-nine runners and walkers from nearly every state of the union, as well as from various foreign nations, took up the chase for Pyle's $48,500 prize money at Los Angeles on March 4. Eighty-four days and 3,422.3 miles later, the end came in Madison Square Garden here Saturday night. The original field of 199 had shrunk to 55 through the operation of the well-known theory of the survival of the fittest. The hardships of the cross-country jaunt—mile after mile of monotonous jogging—had taken care of the rest and put them out of the running.

Thousands of curious New Yorkers lined the streets as the troupe made its way into the Garden, but less than 3,000 thought it worth while to dig down for $1.65 to see them jog the last 20 miles inside the big arena.

The trek done, Andrew Payne, 21-year-old Claremore, Okla., youth, awaits the $25,000 Pyle promised to the man who led the field when mathematicians had figured out the elapsed time for the more than 3,400 miles.

Similarly John Salo, Passaic, N. J., shipworker, wonders how best he can spend the $10,000 that is his by right of finishing second. The next eight finishers should have $13,500 more to divide under the terms of the race.

Pyle declares that the $48,500 in prizes will be forthcoming Friday night at the conclusion of a 24-hour race at the Garden.

Some of the prize-winners, however, wish they could be sure that this is true. The demon promoter, they have been told, has lost $60,000 in the venture, and that control of the race finances passed out of his hands when the bunion caravan left Chicago.

Pittsburgh Second In Open Entries

By VERNOR A. SWARTSFAGER

THE record entry for the sectional qualifying round of the National open golf championship, to be played on 17 courses throughout the country on June 11, shows that Pittsburgh, which strived to lead the nation in number of entrants, ran second. Chicago is a good head and shoulders above Pittsburgh and the other cities with 178 entries, while Pittsburgh leads New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland and the other larger districts, with 126. New York, with only 123, will qualify the same number of players as Pittsburgh—14. Chicago, by virtue of its enormous entry, will qualify 20. The record total entry was 1,033.

According to the United States Golf Association, Fred Baroni of the Conneaut Lake Country Club, an exempt player, has not entered for this year's championship. It was anticipated that the local professional would make another bid for the laurels at Olympia Fields next month. Arthur G. Havers of England and Wee Bobby Cruickshank, reported recovering from an operation, also exempt, are not entered either.

Following is the entry for each district, and the number of qualifiers: Chicago, 178, 20; Pittsburgh, 126, 14; New York, 122, 14; Cleveland, 104, 12; St. Louis, 73, 8; Detroit, 70, 8; Los Angeles, 64, 7; Philadelphia, 50, 6; Dallas, 48, 5; Denver, 44, 5; Boston, 40, 5; Kansas City, 29, 3; Minneapolis, 24, 3; San Francisco, 20, 2; Atlant. 17, 2; Richmond, 12, 2; Portland, 11, 2.

The local qualifying round will be held under the auspices of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association at Oakmont, June 11.

PROS IN TOURNEY

A large field was playing this morning in the first tournament of the season of the Tri-State Professional Golfers' Association over the testy links of the Stanton Heights Golf Club despite low-hanging gray clouds and intermittent rain.

Eighteen holes were played this morning and another 18 in the afternoon. The competition was a four-ball best ball foursome affair. The professionals are mainly tuning up for the national open qualifying round, which is to be held at Oakmont on June 11.

24 CARS ELIGIBLE FOR MOTOR CLASSIC

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—(AP.)—The field of cars eligible to start in the annual 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway next Wednesday has been increased to 24, five more drivers having piloted their mounts over the 10-mile test route at better than 90 miles an hour.

Yesterday was devoid of thrills as compared with Saturday, when Leon Duray and Cliff Woodbury both shattered the one-lap and 10-mile records and Pete De Paolo was injured when his car turned over.

Pros Open Tourney Season

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

DAVE M'KAY, of the Pittsburgh Field Club; George McBride, of the Country Club of Allegheny County; A. C. Chapman, of the Wheeling Country Club, and Dave Clarke, of Castle Shannon, were setting the pace with a best ball score of 32 at the end of the first nine holes of play in the four-ball best ball tournament of the Tri-State Professional Golfers' Association, at the Stanton Heights Golf Club today. The tourney, the association's first of the season, attracted a comparatively small field.

Trailing the McKay-McBride-Chapman-Clark foursome by a single stroke was a trio that found the absence of a fourth member only a slight handicap. The second-place trio was made up by George Underwood, of Alcoma; Charley Rowe, of Oakmont, and Alex Milne, of Longue Vue.

Two foursomes were tied for third honors with a best ball of 34. The first group was made up of Peter O'Hara, of Westmoreland; Perry Delvicchio, of Greensburg; Phil McKay, of Longue Vue, and Tom Bennett, of Youghiogheny, and the second comprised Nelson Zimmerman, Grantham Shows His Value Again in Versatility and Spirit—Signs That Harris Will Stay Please Fans—Time and Patience Only Cure for Slumps—Speed Question Again.

George Grantham

THE extraordinary value of George Grantham to the Pittsburgh club is being shown more clearly right now than ever before.

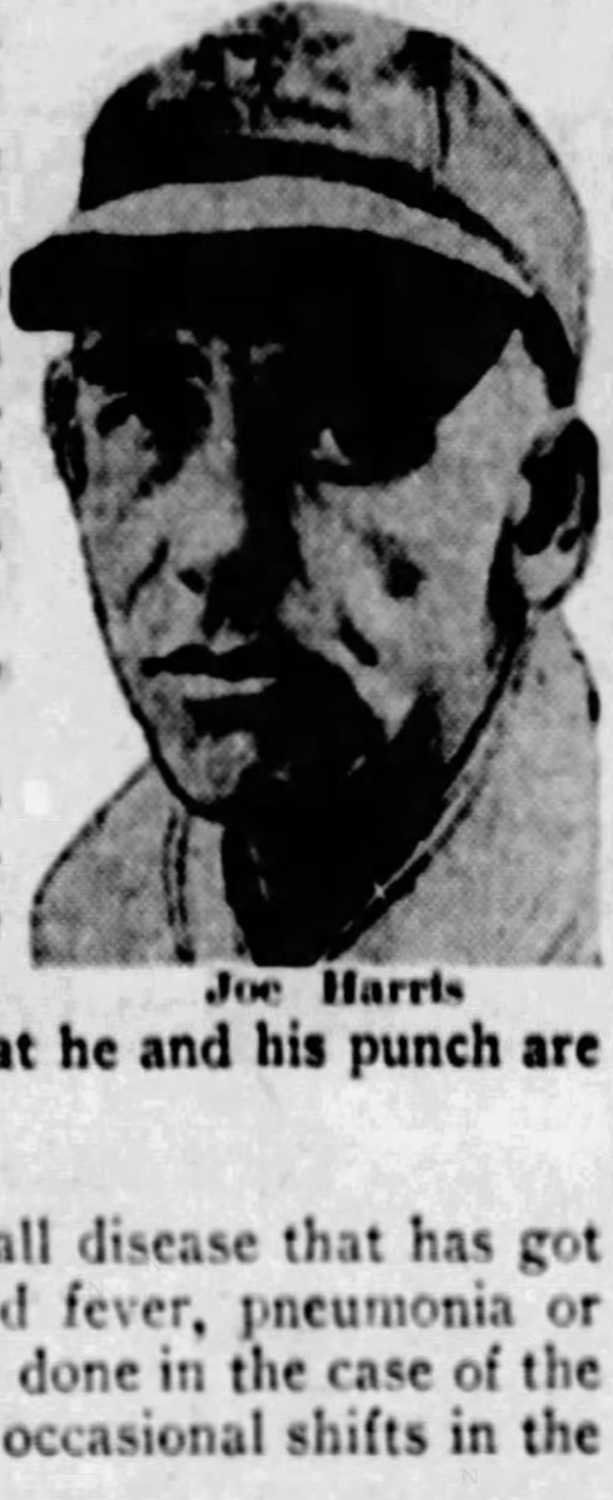
Not only has he been showing his heels to the entire league as a hitter and doing most of the long thumping for the Pirates, but every time it becomes necessary to make a shift in the infield it is the Arizona speed merchant who is moved.

Already transferred to second base in a pinch, Grantham was yesterday moved all the way to third base in order that Joe Harris might be used at first base for the purpose of adding a punch to the Pirate attack and ending the club's slump.

THE club did not materialize and the slump was not broken, the Bucs, on the contrary, being beaten by the Cubs in Chicago for the third time in their string of four encounters that began here last Thursday, but the adverse result of the game did not hide the value of Grantham, who is always ready to step in and play at any position where his services appear to be needed.

His personal preference last year was for first base, but he moved over and did the best he could when he was asked to change to second. This spring he was pleased to be back on his old job at first, but when the call came for him to go to third he went without asking any questions.

IT HAS been said that Grantham lacks color and spirit because he does not make a lot of fuss to attract the attention of the grandstand and make his good plays appear more brilliant than they really are. But that's all due to the fact that he is a player of the quiet, easy-going kind who gives his best all the time lets it go at that without any blaring of trumpets. Third base is not a strange position to Grantham, at that. In fact, he has played everywhere except in the battery places. He was in the outfield for Taoma in 1920 and part of 1921, and for Portland in the latter part of 1921, at third base in 152 games for Omaha in 1922, and played in utility roles for the Cubs in seven games near the close of that campaign. He has since alternated between second and first. Quite a handy guy to have hanging around.



Joe Harris

MANAGER BUSH'S action in putting Joe Harris back in the Pirate lineup was pleasing to the local fans, who were glad to see his old sock again a part of the Buccaneer attack. Joe's return did not change the trend of things yesterday, but he got two of the few hits that the Pirates were able to muster.

Today is one day on which the Bucs cannot lose, as it is an open date in their schedule, and by the time they resume tomorrow against the Cardinals at Forbes Field, Traynor, at least, and possibly Adams, may be ready to play again and Manager Bush may return to his old infield arrangement.

But the temporary using of Harris is pleasing, nevertheless, because, if nothing else, it shows that he is going to be kept in spite of the recent waiver feel, and Joe's many followers like to feel that he and his punch are going to be available here for a while.

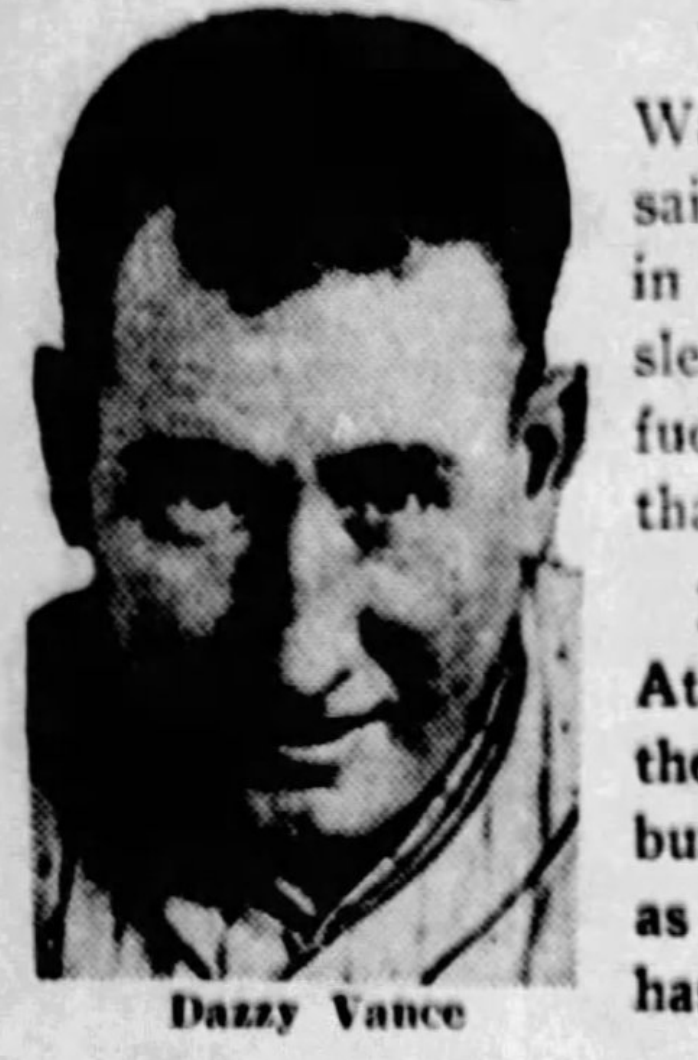
A SLUMP is a slump. It's a baseball disease that has got to run its course just like typhoid fever, pneumonia or other maladies, so there is nothing to be done in the case of the Pirates but wait and hope and trust to occasional shifts in the lineup to break the run of adversity.

The Corsairs have not scored a run in 11 consecutive innings, and in their last two games they have made only one run and 11 hits. Even a world champion ball club looks bad when it is losing and not hitting, but when its slump is over it looks like its old self again and proceeds to make up for lost ground.

It will be the same in the Pirates' case eventually. Keep on rooting and don't lose heart.

IN ADDITION to celebrating with a victory over the Pirates the day given him by his Altoona frends here Saturday, Perce (Pat) Malone, the strikeout artist of the Cub staff, placed another feather in his cap by being the fourth man this season to hold Glenn Wright hitless throughout a full game. Wright has been one of the most consistent batters in the league, and at one stretch he hit safely in 15 consecutive games. The only other hurlers before Malone to hold him hitless in a game were Alexander, of the Cards, on April 12; Blake, of the Cubs, on April 24, and Elliott, of the Robins, on May 13. Malone was the only pitcher to do it on the Bucs' home grounds.

AMERICAN LEAGUERS are claiming that the speed of Dazzy Vance is exceeded this year by both Bob Grove and Rube Walberg of the Athletics.



Dazzy Vance

Incidentally, the improvement in Walberg's effectiveness this season is said to be due in part to the fact that in games he is wearing a torn shirt sleeve on his pitching arm to help befuddle the batters, like the flying tatters that helped Dazzy reach his peak.

But Catcher Mickey Cochrane of the Athletics, who has been interviewed on the subject, says that at times Walberg burns his glove with speed fully as fast as Grove's but over a long period Grove has the most smoke.

"MY HANDS are puffed up after catching both of them," explained Cochrane. "The men are about even on certain pitches, but Walberg's style does not call for speed as sustained as does Grove's.

"I will say that against certain clubs Walberg sends they up like a rifle shot. He mixes up a lot of curves, but Grove bears down all the time. I would say there is little difference between the pair."

GROVE'S mound work this season has been the most sensational of his career. He has added a baffling curve to his speed which seems to have added to his effectiveness. In two consecutive games he fanned 22 batters and in three straight games he whiffed 31 batters.

Bartell's work from the time he got into the game as a sub for Adams has been of a sensational order and he has become a favorite with the fans. They like his snappy fielding and dash and believe he will come along in his batting.

HORNSBY, "RIVAL" UNITED

BOSTON, May 28.—(AP.)—George H. Sisler, once one of the greatest first basemen and batters in the American League, joined the ranks of the Boston Braves today by virtue of outright purchase from the Washington Senators.

The deal was the first consummated by the Braves under the management of Rogers Hornsby, star second sacker, who took over the reins from Jack Slattery a few days ago.

It brought to Boston Hornsby's strongest rival in the affection of St. Louis fans in the days when Hornsby wore a Cardinal uniform and Sisler the Brown.

Although no official announcement of Sisler's assignment was forthcoming from the club offices, it was generally believed that he would take Dick Burrus' place at once, and that Burrus, who has not demonstrated anything like his old time form, would be held temporarily as a reserve.

Sisler has been on the market without a taker since shortly after the opening of the season. Originally thought to be in line for Joe Judge's place, Sisler was given little opportunity to show what he could do and there were persistent reports that recurrence of eye and sinus trouble which had forced him

Thousands Stand All Night for Soccer Tickets

AMSTERDAM, May 28.—(AP.)—The downtown section presented an unusual spectacle today for a whit Monday. Streets in the vicinity of the Olympic games box office were jammed with people hoping to obtain one of the 8,000 tickets for the Holland-Uruguay soccer match on Wednesday, remaining after the demands of the members of Holland's hundreds of football clubs were satisfied.

Some enthusiasts began to assemble before the box office as early as 10 a. m. Sunday. They were later augmented by hundreds who joined in an all-night vigil. At daybreak others began to arrive.

The Olympic committee estimated that the stadium which with standing room accommodates 48,000 persons could have been sold several times over.

M'LARNIN TO GO TO PRISON FRIDAY

HASTINGS, N. Y., May 28.—(I. N. S.)—Jimmy McLarnin, lightweight fighter from California, who was defeated by Champion Sammy Mandell last week, is going to prison.

Jimmy will be in Sing Sing next Friday night, but he'll be pounding another prizefighter—not rocks. At a dinner given in his honor here last night by John J. Hanley, McLarnin announced he would appear in an exhibition bout against an unnamed opponent before the convicts.

FANS SIT IN RAIN TO SEE BABE, YANKS

YORK, Pa., May 28.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees defeated York of the New York-Pennsylvania League, 9 to 2, here yesterday before 4,000 fans who sat throughout the game in a drizzling rain which kept down the attendance.

Babe Ruth hit a home run, two singles, walked once and struck out on his last appearance at the bat. Paschal also hit over the fence, while Jim Tennant, hurling for York, hit for the circuit and collected two doubles.

CORSAIRS BACK FOR SET WITH CARDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

BACK from Chicago, where yesterday they sustained another setback, the Pirates today rejoiced in an open date on their playing schedule. The idle day will give the lame and the halt a chance to nurse their sickness and injuries, and surely Donie Bush is beset with troubles of this nature, what with only one pitcher ready to do nine innings and two of his regular infield stars on the hospital list.

Burleigh Grimes is the only one of the five slab aces of the spring time who has been able to stand up under the strain of the competition, the other four righthanders having one ailment or another. Lee Meadows has not thrown a ball in a championship game. Carmen Hill has been under the care of a physician. John Miljus has been off for almost two weeks with a sore arm, while Remy Kremer has not been himself, due to an ailing leg.

With pitching admitted to be about 60 per cent of any club's welfare, it is not hard to answer the question, "What's wrong with the Pirates?" In view of the fact that only Grimes is able to go the distance, a little luck and Bur-

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

FOR some time a battle has been smouldering between the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., and the State Athletic Commission anent the legality of commission's action in assuming control of amateur boxing to the extent that it insists on the use of licensed officials, examinations of the boxers by commission-appointed doctors and the collection of the 5 per cent tax called for by the law.

I say this battle has been smouldering because now, of a sudden, it has blazed out in the open, with the amateur officials forcing the issue. In a heated statement issued for publication, the sponsors of amateur shows are advised to ignore the commission, which is accused of a lack of patriotism, in that it will not waive the 5 per cent tax for an amateur show to be held for the benefit of the American Olympic fund, and a lot of other dirty linen is washed.

Feeling that the time has arrived for a public airing of the situation, this writer hereby prints both sides.

FIRST, the screed from the amateur authorities, intended for use as a news item:

"The Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission, which has charge of professional boxing in the state, has adopted drastic measures to compel the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., to recognize its authority. The local association, some time ago, informed Deputy Attorney General Schnader, on whose opinion the commission is taking its stand, that it is ready at any time to finally decide the question by having the courts settle it, but so far the Attorney General has made no move.

"The latest act of the local boxing commissioner was to try to stop an amateur boxing show at Apollo, Pa. The commissioner notified the burgess to stop the show, but the burgess did not recognize the order.

"Some time ago, this same commissioner informed the Motor Square Garden management that its license would be revoked if it leased its place to the amateurs who proposed staging a boxing show for the benefit of the Olympic fund. It is no wonder the American Olympic Committee has trouble raising money to send America's team to Amsterdam when it has to contend with such "patriotic" efforts as are exhibited by the local boxing commissioner.

"At Johnstown, Pa., this commissioner tried to stop an amateur show for the benefit of St. Francis College.

"THE ALLEGHENY MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION, through its president, William S. Haddock, has notified all the clubs in the association to pay no attention to the professional boxing commission, as it has absolutely no jurisdiction over amateur boxing, and to ignore all threats to invoke the police power.

"The commission knows well enough that the Attorney General's opinion informed it that no criminal prosecution could be invoked against amateurs, but, if the case justified it, an amateur organization could be sued civilly in court for the tax only.

"All amateur clubs recognizing the state professional commissioner, in this district, will be refused A. A. U. sanctions, the result being that the development of clean amateur boxing competition will be at a standstill, all leigh would have copped seven of his nine games.

He is credited with five victories and in at least two others he was entitled to the laurel. Burleigh has been impressive since the day he landed at Paso Robles.

CARDS HERE TOMORROW

The Redbirds are slated to open a four-game series tomorrow, the series to feature the Decoration Day period in the Oakland Orchard. Bill McKechnie's ambitious team will meet the Pirates in a single contest tomorrow afternoon. Wednesday afternoon the two clubs will stage the annual Memorial Day program, with contests arranged for morning and afternoon. A single game on Thursday will wind up the series.

Grimes is ready to challenge the Redbirds in the opener. The pitchers for Decoration Day are somewhat in doubt owing to the ailing condition of the staff.

Sheriff Blake of West Virginia returned to the mound for the Cubs yesterday after a two weeks' layoff caused by illness, and proceeded to blank the Buccos. He permitted just five safe blows and was never in serious trouble.

Chicago put over the run that would have been enough to have won the game in the fourth inning. Webb singled to start the inning. Wilson fanned. Heathcote was passed and then Grimm doubled to right and Webb counted.

In the fifth inning, Maguire beat out an infield hit, went to second when Bartell and L. Waner collided trying for Webb's fly over second base and scored when Heathcote singled after Wilson had been retired.

The Pirates threatened in the fourth inning. Wright singled and went to third when Joe Harris also singled, but Bush put on the screws by forcing Comorosky to hit into a double play. Commy turned the same trick in the seventh after Harris had opened the game with a single.

PIE TO BE BACK

A silver lining in the rather bleak sky was disclosed with the announcement that Capt. Pie Traynor in all probability would be able to take his place in the Pittsburgh lineup tomorrow. Pie has almost recovered from an attack of grip. Sparky Adams, who has been ill with the flu for more than a week, is on the mend, but it is not believed that Sparky will get in until after the holiday games are over.

The contest dropped to the Cubs yesterday was the third defeat in a row for the Buccos and the Cubs grabbed the three contests after losing the opener in Pittsburgh Thursday.

The Buccos are still ahead on the season's series with the Bruins, six to four, but the Bears were able to put over a winning streak of 13 games, and as a result are flying high.

Manager Bush is trying various moves in an effort to get his ailing club in a better stride. The switch in the lineup yesterday was a wise move, but the Cubs are playing high-class ball and are in much better shape physically.

Bush was undecided as to a workout today owing to the condition of some of his players. It is likely that some of the Oaklanders will be put through their sprints.

SISLER

out of the game in 1922 had robbed him of his effectiveness.

The Senators asked waivers on the former star, but none of the American League clubs sought his services, and he became available to the National League.

Hornsby and Sisler met at a hotel last week. The man who in 1922 had been voted the most valuable player in the league and had batted .420 told the new manager of the Braves that his sight was right and general health good.

No details of the financial arrangements were made public, but it was reported that the Braves, in addition to assuming Sisler's contract, probably paid considerably over the waiver price of $7,500.

West Holds Slight Edge

By JESS CARVER.

IN COMPARISON to 1927, when the records made by athletes competing in the I. C. A. A. A. A. championships outclassed those recorded in the Big Ten meet by a margin of 14 to 1, this year's honors must be accorded the Westerners, but by a margin vastly narrower—a mere eight to six advantage.

Saturday afternoon, with a steady rain drenching the track and field and making fast performances on the part of the runners seemingly impossible, I. C. 4-A stars at Cambridge made fine bids for Olympic honors, and in half a dozen events turned in near world record performances. Out at Evanston, the Big Ten stars, with Illinois leading the way, also displayed power, especially in the track events. In every event but one in the field the Easterners were much superior. The high jump was a tie.

The Big Ten marks were best in the 100, 220 and 440-yard dashes, the half-mile, mile and two-mile runs and both the high and low hurdle events. The East turned in superior results in the shot put, javelin, discus, broad jump, hammer throw and pole vault.

The advantage the West held in first places, however, did not offset the all-around strength the Eastern athletes exhibited, and when it is considered that the weather conditions at Cambridge were decidedly unfavorable, it will be readily admitted that the Eastern athletes showed a general superiority.

For example, in the shot put, the winning distance at Evanston would have taken but fourth place at Cambridge. This was also true in the broad jump. In the hammer, Ketz, who won in the Big Ten meet, would have barely placed fifth at Harvard.

Rasmus' winning toss of 144 feet 9 inches in the discus at Evanston would have been good for fourth in the East, as it was over an inch short of Gibby Welch's third place mark.

WIN ON TRACK

In the track events, a mere tenth of a second separated the winning times in the century. The Western victory was a second and a tenth faster in the 220 than the Eastern champ and in the quarter-mile, they were three-tenths of a second faster in the West. How matters would have stood had the track been dry in the east and chaps like Borah competed is a different matter.

At any rate, it is certain that the U. S. Olympic team will not be without its share of college stars. Cuhel of Iowa is by far the best low hurdler running today, and will give men like Steinbrenner, 1927 I. C. 4-A. champion, plenty of competition. Cuhel has equaled Steinbrenner's 23 9-10 for the 220-yard timbers. Krenz is certain to make the team as a shot and discus entry. Bates of Penn State and Simon of Illinois, Dyer of Dartmouth and Zombro of Stanford are all A-1 broad jumpers—Bates apparently the best of the lot.

Walter, Northwestern's kid quarter-miler, with a mark of 48 5-10 seconds, will be heard from in that event at the Olympic trials. He looms as a foe equal of the Rosses, Spencers and Barbutis.

Carr, Barnes, Pickard and Edmonds still hold top rank as pole vaulters. King, Maynard, Hedges, Frey, Anson and Miller are a fine aggregation of high jumpers, though they will meet stiff competition in men like Burg, Sheppard, Haggard and Osborn, now out of collegiate competition. King and Maynard, under favorable conditions, are the best of the lot.

BARBUTI, KRENZ STAR

Ray Barbuti, Syracuse captain, and Eric Krenz were the bright lights of the I. C. 4-A. meet. Barbuti upset all the dope by winning the 220 and 440-yard dashes. He showed Spencer and Ross, pre-meet favorites in the quarter, a clean pair of heels, and kicked some hotsy-totsy cinders into the faces of the Stanford and Yale stars. In the 220 he was equally superior.

Krenz merely broke two long standing records in the shot and discus. Touted as a star, he more than lived up to his reputation. Fifty feet 1 inch is a long way to put the 16-pound shot, and 154 feet 11 inches a tremendous long heave for the discus—try it some time and see if you can get it 50 feet away from you.

Bates' broadjumping puts him in a class with Gourdin, Hubbar and Lengendre.

TO DEDICATE MATTY'S MEMORIAL JUNE 5

LEWISBURG, Pa., May 25.—(AP.)—The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States paid tribute to Christy Mathewson, baseball player and World War veteran, at his grave here yesterday.

Seven posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, of which the "Big Six" was a member, attended the memorial services. They were from Philadelphia, Glenside, Harrisburg, Williamsport, Sunbury, Milton and Lewistown. William B. Scull, of Philadelphia, commander of Horn-Ross-Weiss Post, had charge of the services.

On June 5, the Christy Mathewson memorial gateway to the Bucknell memorial stadium will be dedicated here. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis will deliver the dedicatory address.

SPEAKING of SPORTS

by HARRY KECK

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

through the autocratic and despotic action of a badly guided boxing commission, which deliberately ignores the intent of the Legislature which enacted the law."

AND now, the retort courteous from Havey J. Boyle, the well-known sidewalks traverser, who is the local boxing commissioner aimed at in the above epistle. Boyle was asked to read the amateur moguls' attack on him and to make reply, which he has done as follows:

"The argument is: Is the State Athletic Commission empowered to supervise amateur shows? The amateurs say 'no' and the commission says 'yes.' Before the commission took its stand it asked the Attorney General of the state for his counsel. He replied in a written opinion:

"'Section Four of the law unquestionably renders subject to the jurisdiction of your commission not only boxing, sparring and wrestling matches or exhibitions "for purses," but also such exhibitions where an admission fee is received. Whether the contestants are professionals or amateurs is immaterial if an admission fee is charged and received.

"'Accordingly, you are advised that your commission has jurisdiction of all boxing, sparring and wrestling matches or exhibitions to which an admission fee is charged and that all persons holding such matches or exhibitions must pay to the commonwealth 5 per centum of the gross receipts realized from admission fees.'

"The amateur officials do not deny they charge and receive admission fees.

"I might say that in Philadelphia and in the central part of the state the amateur union officials, instead of differing with this opinion, gladly accept the commission's jurisdiction, willingly pay the 5 per cent tax, and thank the commission for its help in supervising the amateur shows. It is only in the Pittsburgh district that the amateur officials see fit to object to the commission's jurisdiction and this in the face of an opinion by their own legal counsel that the commission's attitude is the correct one. I challenge the amateur officials to deny any part of that statement.

"IN order to gain some sympathy, I imagine, the amateur union statement says, among other things, that I interfered with an amateur show held in Johnstown for the benefit of St. Francis College, and that I am obstructing the holding of an amateur show in Motor Square Garden, the proceeds of which are to pay expenses of the United States entries in the Olympic events at Amsterdam.

"The law is the law, regardless of the citizens involved. In connection with the proposed benefit for the amateurs here, the statement says: 'It is no wonder the American Olympic Committee has trouble raising money to send America's team to Amsterdam when it has to contend with such "patriotic" efforts as exhibited by the local commissioner.'

"The amateurs may choose to believe that I would be a great patriot by allowing them to evade the law pertaining to boxing, and, on the other hand, there may be citizens, who, realizing that the Attorney General has made clear my duty to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in this connection, may think my patriotism will compare favorably with that of the A. A. U. officials if I uphold the law.

"On the minutes of the commission meetings I have noted carefully the local controversy and the course I am pursuing has the unanimous approval of the commission, with the backing of the Attorney General.

"THE amateur union officials and this commissioner differ on one other point, insignificant, but mentioned here to keep the record straight. The statement said I invoked the aid of the burgess of Apollo to stop a show. This is an error. I never spoke to the burgess of Apollo. I did speak to the burgess of Vandergrift, who kindly said he would look into the amateur show planned there, and that he did look into it is proved by the fact that the men operating the show called me by 'phone and expressed a willingness to conform with what requirements I set forth.

"Until the law is changed I will continue the course I have been following. It will seem strange to the public that while the amateur union officials here profess to believe the present law does not affect them they plan a determined fight against the law at the next Legislature. I wonder why that is?"

BINGER BAYNE FANS IN BILL REGAN PARTY

A party of 25 local baseball fans will figuratively kill two birds with one stone next Sunday when it will merge with the Bill Regan booster excursion to Cleveland to pay tribute to the prowess of the popular Brookline star who is playing such an excellent game for the Boston Red Sox this season. These 25 are close friends of Binger Bayne of Oakmont, pitcher for the Cleveland club, who may oppose the Red Sox that day.

The occasion will be a real Pittsburgh day at Dunn Field, with the local delegation of upwards of 500 acclaiming the efforts of two native sons in American League regalia, and the highly esteemed Honus Wagner accompanying the visitors to pay his personal respects to the players and make presentations before the game begins.

Reservations in the party will be held open until Friday night to permit all who wish to accompany it to get in line. Reservation application blanks may be obtained at the Aim Pharmacy in Brookline, Honus Wagner's store, downtown; the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Station, Consolidated ticket offices, downtown, and at the stores of Gus Miller and Henry Hirschberg in Oakland. An all-cost plan of $7.25 per person has been worked out. This includes railroad fare, bus transportation in Cleveland and luncheon at the Hollenden Hotel, where the Red Sox will stop.

BRIDGEVILLE ENTRY LIST IS CLOSED

Four last-minute entries increased the number of drivers entered in the opening races of the season at the Bridgeville Speedway Wednesday afternoon, (Memorial Day) and when the qualifying trials get under way tomorrow afternoon 21 racing celebrities will vie for the coveted positions.

The four drivers who turned in signed blanks Saturday night were: Ray Campbell, Detroit; J. Pickering, St. Clairsville; R. McKenzie, Oakmont, and William Pieffer, Ambridge.

Tomorrow's qualifying trials are expected to be productive of some spirited competition. Only 12 drivers will qualify for the main event of 50 miles, the four leaders in this race to meet in the final event of 25 miles. A special 25-mile race will be staged for the drivers that failed to qualify.

The Memorial Day program will start promptly at 3 o'clock.

MACKS OBTAIN EARNSHAW IN ORIOLE DEAL

BALTIMORE, May 28.—George Earnshaw, right-handed pitching ace of the Baltimore Orioles, has been traded to the Philadelphia Athletics for cash and Pitchers Bill Shores and Jing Johnson, Manager Dunn, of the International League club, announced today. The amount of cash involved in the deal was not made public.

All three of the pitchers are right handed. Earnshaw is to report to the American League club today, and Shores and Johnson also will report today for duty with the Orioles.

Earnshaw, 28 years old, attracted attention first at Swarthmore where he starred in baseball, football and basketball. He signed with the Orioles in 1921 but did not report until two seasons later and then injured his arm the first year in the South. Later in the summer, however, he recovered and turned in eight straight wins. His best years were 1925, when he won 29 and lost 11, and 1926, when he won 22 and lost 14. In the 1925 little world series he reached the high spot of his Baltimore pitching career with three victories over Louisville.

Bambino Plans To Try Jolly Old Cricket

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—(INS.)—Babe Ruth, king of the home run hitters, plans to take a crack at the jolly old game of cricket. The burly outfilder of the New York Yankees declares that he will engage a cricket expert in New York to teach him the fine points of the English game, and will tour England in a few years as cricketeer if he masters the sport.

American League pitchers freely expressed the opinion that if the Babe can successfully transform his home run wallop into cricket swing he will make the English stars sit up and take notice.

SANDLOT BASEBALL

by TOM BIRKS

PLENTY of interesting baseball was flashed on local sandlots yesterday, the feature game being played at Harlan Field, where the Jimmy Smith Club had to go 12 innings to beat the W. O. W. outfit by a 7 to 5 score.

STEVE ROSCOE sure had the Smith sluggers going for six frames, not a hit being garnered off the Box star. When the sixth started, W. O. W. was leading by a 5 to 0 score and Roscoe throwing all kinds of strikeouts. But Burke's hitters finally got the range and tied up the game to win out in the twelfth.

LA BOON started for the Smith outfit, and when the hitting started, Cruikshank went in and pitched a great game. It was easily the best sandlot game of the season. A wonderful crowd lined the field to watch the action.

ST. JOHNS ran into a smart pitcher in Hickey, a left-hander, who had the ball doing all kinds of tricks. Turek was pitching a nice game for the Saints, but with Hickey making everybody pop up and strike out, his work was in vain. This Aim Club is a smart outfit and easily one of the best combinations the writer has looked over this season.

MANAGER HARRY FINN of the Book Shoe nine is finding it tough booking games for his classy outfit that is now leading the City League. The Shoe boys have a strong club with one of the best pitching staffs in the district. The team has Decoration Day open abroad for two games with a first-class club, also Sundays. Manager Finn would like to hear from Beltzhoover, Dormont, Jordans, Boston, Studebakers, Duquesne or any team in this class. Call Lafayette 2859-J in the evening or Court 2656, during the day.

THE big game this evening will find Homewood-Brushton traveling to Sullivan Field to meet the St. Johns nine. These outfits were booked to clash at the Playgrounds Saturday, but inclement weather forced a postponement.

Heinie Boll is a prime favorite with the fans down in the Strip district. Boll was a member of the famous Sullivan team of other years together with Durkin, and Ollie Carnegie, so a large crowd should be on hand.

WHEN are managers going to get wise and refuse to play games without an Association umpire handling the game? Last Saturday one of the leading teams of the district walked off the field when it claimed it was being given the "works."

In outlying districts, home town men are used and winning ball games is a tough proposition for visitors. Of course, there are exceptions, but visiting managers can overcome that by refusing to play or agree to the game without having an Association man calling them. It might cost a little more money but everyone has the satisfaction of knowing that these men are unbiased and call them as they see them.

HOLIDAY games away from home, and twilight, Saturday and Sunday games are being sought by Morgan O'Brien, manager of the Lawrenceville Keystone Club. Games are desired with the best clubs in the district. Call Fiske 2051-M.

THE North Side Civics will be the attraction at the home of the J. L. Thomas nine at Dean Field this evening. Both clubs are beginning to round into form and a big battle is expected with the league title at stake.

THE Beckman Chevrolets have reorganized and have signed such well-known players as Jiggers Archer, Jim Striley, Walter Mack and Gus Eiler. The Chevrolets are booking first-class clubs. Any manager desiring a good attraction write H. E. Lutton, 221 Matthews avenue, or call Lafayette 5657-M.

How Stocks Have Relapsed. Little Public Selling Yet.

By B. C. FORBES

ARE so many people putting every available dollar into the stock market that trade is suffering?

Probably to some extent. For, go where you will, mix with whom you will—workers, professional men, everybody—the stock market dominates the talk. Every little group of men tell of their successful exploits in stocks.

If a day of reckoning comes, there will be less relating of experiences.

THE fact is that already not a few fingers have been burned. The popular notion is that stocks have been going up and up, with only the mildest of breathing spells between the rises.

Here are a few figures showing how far certain stocks were on Friday below their recent peaks:

HOW irresponsible and meaninglessly stocks are being tossed about, now up, now down, is illustrated by what happened last week. Average quotations on the New York Stock Exchange on Monday fell $2.58; on Tuesday they fell $2.50; on Wednesday they rose $2.54; on Thursday they rose $1.16; on Friday they fell 24 cents.

Such fluctuations reflect mainly the catch-as-catch-an operations of powerful bulls and bears. So far the declines have not greatly scared the millions of outside holders of stocks.

But some day the market is likely to get entirely out of hand and the professionals swept aside by an avalanche of public selling. At least, that is what stock market history teaches us to expect.

THE Federal Reserve authorities are still striving to check the unprecedented speculation. Some of the more superficially minded bulls have bragged that "the stock market has made a monkey out of the Federal Reserve."

However, the volume of speculation has been somewhat reduced and it remains to be seen whether the restoration of the five-hour daily session will bring the former tidal wave of transactions. Average quotations are more than six points under the peak. For the first time in almost three months brokers' loans last week declined $46,000,000. Rediscounts were swollen $40,000,000 last week and the reserve banks called nearly $32,000,000 of their government securities, reflecting the attempt to check speculative borrowing. Also, gold exports continue.

The laugh may not always be on the reserve board. He laughs best who laughs last.

IMPENDING political events are still totally ignored by speculators. In the highest financial circles political developments are not particularly relished. The triumphant ingathering of delegates by Governor Smith is causing some Republicans uneasiness. Talk of "drafting" Coolidge is revived. Secretary Hoover's impressive progress as a delegate-getter causes little exuberance among those who doubt his vote-winning personality and campaign ability.

MAY has brought no pronounced change in the industrial or general business trend. Some slight improvement is reported here and there. Let us hope there will be sufficient business settlement to obviate the need for disastrously drastic readjustment in stick market prices.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, May 28.—With showers in Canada and moisture expected south of the international boundary, wheat prices averaged lower today during the early dealings. Field advices from the spring crop belt as a whole however, continued unfavorable. Opening at ⅛@1⅛c decline, wheat later fluctuated rapidly but kept near to the initial limits. Corn and oats were relatively firm, corn starting ⅛c off to ⅛c up and subsequent scoring gains all around. Provisions tended to sag.

At noon, wheat was ⅝c to 1nc net higher and corn ¼c to ⅜c up.

It was distinctly a weather market today in wheat. Reports of showers in spring wheat territory and indications of more were accompanied by advices emphasizing need of heavy widespread moisture. One leading expert telegraphing from Glenwood, Minn., said general rain must come soon or the Northwest crop of wheat this season will be very light.

Another crop authority reported from Lisbon, N. D., that high winds and hot days are drying up surface moisture very fast. He said much of the wheat from Fargo to Lisbon was seeded in March and ought now to be shooting, but is not, and is generally thin and stunted from lack of moisture.

The following grain quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

COPPER RISES FAIL TO HALT DECLINES

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP.)—The line of least resistance in today's stock market was downward. Although pools succeeded in lifting more than a score food and copper shares and specialties to new high records, selling pressure was quite persistent against the standard industrials and rails, many of the declines in which ran from 1 to 5 points. Trading was only moderate in volume, total sales in the first three hours running well below 2,000,000 shares.

Uneasiness over the credit situation was the principal selling factor. Call money held firm at 6 per cent as banks called about $10,000,000 in loans, and that rate is expected to continue over the month-end. Withdrawal of $15,000,000 in gold for export to England Wednesday had a tendency to check bullish enthusiasm.

Violent fluctuations took place in some of the high-priced specialties. Radio was again a feature, rallying from a low of 197⅝, off 5⅜, to 206⅜. Airplane stocks were weak, Wright breaking 13½ points to 172 and Curtiss dropping 11⅞ to 126.

Chrysler moved up more than 2 points to within a fraction of the year's high, but the other motors were heavy, Pierce Arrow preferred dropping 4 points and Studebaker and Hudson each falling back 2 points. Extreme declines of 4 points or so also were recorded by Dupont, Case Treshing Machine, Otis Elevator, American Railway Express and Richfield Oil of California, while such recent favorites as International Harvester, Continental Can, Greene Cananea Copper, International Paper and Brooklyn Edison yielded 2 points or so.

New York State Railways preferred and City Stores B each were bid up more than 3 points to new peak prices at 34 and 35, respectively. Frank G. Shattuck ran up 5½ points and Certainteed Products, which was heavily sold last week on unfavorable dividend rumors, rallied 4 points at the expense of an over-crowded short interest.

The closing was weak. High-priced utilities led a recovery which temporarily converted some of the earlier declines into material advances. Radio reached 211⅝, a new peak, and Detroit Edison also was at a new maximum when it got to 199. International Harvester, International T. & T., General Motors and General Electric were other high-priced stocks that went up fast when the turn in the market came. Later, selling caused prices of many stocks to break badly again, Radio slipping down around 200. Total sales approximated 3,000,000 shares.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., May 28.—The Rev. W. E. Smith, pastor of the Avondale Street Free Methodist Church, yesterday announced his resignation. He has been in ill health since his transfer here last fall from Fairmont, W. Va.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Money Reaches 6½ Per Cent.

Stocks took a sudden downward turn when call money was marked up to 6½ per cent late this afternoon. This is the highest rate for demand accommodation in about two years and was followed by heavy selling of the recent speculative favorites. Losses throughout the list ranged from 2 to 10 points from the earlier high points.

Market on Old Schedule.

The New York Stock Exchange returned to its old five-hour schedule today after a week's experiment of closing at 2 p. m. instead of 3. The popular speculative fever has not yet become an uncontrollable flame. The experiment with a shorter working day definitely revealed that the volume of speculating can be automatically influenced by modifying the length of the trading session. While the four-hour trading day was in vogue a 20 per cent reduction in the time alloted to the execution of orders resulted in a 30-40 per cent curtailment of the volume of transactions. Amateurs, who were unmoved by the subtle efforts of the federal reserve authorities to quiet down speculation through rediscount advances and open market operations, were immediately impressed with the fact that the stock exchange governors considered the recent craze sufficiently abnormal to order early closings. The shift in the time schedule resulted in more caution and discrimination last week.

Fisher's Stock Index Down.

Prof. Irving Fisher's stock exchange price index is 360.3 for the past week, against 361.1 the previous week and 336.1 a month ago. Prof. Fisher's index number of commodity prices is 96.8 for the past week, against 95.6 the previous week and 96.7 a month ago.

Rolling Mill Orders Engines.

The American Rolling Mill Company has ordered three 300-horsepower oil-electric locomotives, to be built jointly by the Ingersoll Rand Company, General Electric and American Locomotive Company.

Testing New Electrical Board.

An automatic quotation board, which performs by an electrical system the work now done by "board boys" in brokerage offices, is being tested out in an office in New York. If found to be successful it promises to revolutionize the method of recording fluctuations in stock prices. Only one operator is required to run a board under the new system. The board is attached to an electric light socket and the operator, sitting at a machine somewhat similar in appearance to a typewriter, directs the operation. The boards automatically shifts the figures as the prices change. The high, low and last prices are shown and when a sale involves a change in the high or low for the day the machine makes the substitution in figures. By a system of lights the board informs the watchers whether the market is advancing or declining, a green light indicating advances and a red light declines. It can be operated from any distance, just as the prices on the stock exchange floor are transmitted over the ticker from a central transmitting machine. It will be possible in time, it is hoped, to operate a chain of the boards scattered all over the country from one machine.

Abitibi Paper Refunding.

National City Company, Peabody, Smith & Co., Inc., Peabody, Houghteling & Co., Wood, Gundy & Co., Inc., and Royal Securities Corporation are offering at $102 a share $10,000,000 additional Abitibi Power and Paper Company, Ltd., 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock. Proceeds will be used to retire certain funded indebtedness and preferred stocks of subsidiaries preliminary to issuance of mortgage bonds to refund all other funded indebtedness at a substantial saving in annual interest and dividend requirements.

National City Company, on behalf of the offering syndicate, announced that at noon subscriptions had been received in excess of the issue and that books were closed.

Surplus Cars Decrease.

Class 1 railroads on May 15 had 299,629 surplus freight cars available for service, according to American Railway Association, decrease of 2,268 cars compared with May 8.

Youngstown Operations Firm.

Steel mill operations in the Youngstown district have firmed enough to bring average output to 75 per cent. Recently, it had been wavering under that level. Of 53 independent open-hearth furnaces 36 are making steel, compared with 34 the past week. Of 20 seamless and welding pipe mills 14 are in commission, while of 127 independent sheet and jobbing mills 104 are under power. This is a gain of two units in pipe mills and maintenance of recent rates in sheets.

California Crude Output Up.

Crude oil production for the state of California for the week ended May 26 amounted to 626,500 barrels, an increase of 3,000 barrels over the week preceding. The Seminole, Okla., area for 24 hours to 7 a. m. Saturday produced 274,966 barrels of crude oil, against 277,859 barrels on Friday and the peak of 527,400 barrels on July 30, 1927.

Prescott, Lyon Awarded Bonds.

Prescott, Lyon & Co., Pittsburgh, have been awarded an issue of $26,000 Seward independent school district, Westmoreland county, Pa., 4½ per cent bonds, due serially August 1, 1929-1948 inclusive.

United States Distributing Net Drops.

United States Distributing Corporation net income was $136,807 for the March quarter after depreciation, depletion and federal taxes, equal to $1.31 a share on $10,422,600 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, comparing with net of $244,157 or 14 cents a share on 377,436 common shares after preferred dividends in the March, 1927 quarter.

B. & O. April Net Decreases.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad April net operating income was $3,094,650, compared with [illegible] for April, 1927. Four months net operating income totaled $9,337,016, against $12,962,716 in the corresponding period of 1927.

Street Thinks Coolidge Will Run.

Market followers, from the biggest professional to the 10-share trader, show less worry over politics than in any presidential year of this century. The reason is that the Street is confident that President Coolidge will be "drafted." The only thing that will end such belief would be a statement from the President that he "will not accept the nomination under any consideration." Recent developments, both in Congress and the campaigning, have strengthened the Street's belief, particularly the reaction to the McNary-Haugen veto. There are numerous traders holding on to stocks largely in anticipation of "market celebration" of a "Coolidge nomination."

Associated Stock Exchanges.

The board of governors of the Associated Stock Exchanges, a voluntary organization composed of various stock exchanges throughout the country, including the Pittsburgh institution, will meet in Columbus, O., Friday, to hear committee reports and decide the city in which the annual convention will be held. B. Preston Schoyer is the local representative of the board of governors of the association.

Aeroplane Transportation.

With the exception of passenger transportation, aviation in the United States has developed to a greater extent than in any other country, according to the New York Trust Company. "No country in Europe has achieved as efficient and extensive a system of mail transportation as exists here. The use of the airplane in this way and for freight carrying and for aerial services has proceeded to such an extent that there are more commercial and civil airplanes in this country than in any other. The total number of commercial and civil airplanes in Germany, France, England and Italy is 1,877 for the four countries combined. In the United States the total number of commercial and civil airplanes is 3,230. There are 78 airplane factories in the four countries mentioned; in the United States there are 103." In Europe passenger transportation shows continual extension of routes and an expansion of traffic. Fares have been reduced to a point where they are now about equal to that first-class railroad traffic and the service maintains a regularity of 94 per cent. This has been accomplished under a high standard of safety. In the past two years in the British service, for example, there have been no accidents whatsoever resulting in death or injury. Germany carried about 56,000 passengers in 1926, Great Britain 20,000; France, 19,000; Holland, 6,260; Italy, 4,000. Although the figures are not yet available, each country showed a considerable increase in 1927.

Orpheum Circuit Net Halved.

Orpheum Circuit, Inc., reports consolidated net income for the year ended December 31 last of $1,121,499, equal after preferred dividends to $1.13 a share on 549,170 shares of common stock outstanding, comparing with net of $2,066,176 or $2.69 a share in 1926.

Use of Brass Pipe Expands.

Almost four times as much brass pipe is used today as in 1922, sales last year amounting to 62,934,300 pounds, the Copper and Brass Research Association says. This total is expected to be exceeded by 18,000,000 pounds in 1928. In 1923, sales showed an increase of only 5 per cent. Since then the average annual gain has been 74.5 per cent.

American Agricultural Chemical.

Wall Street is showing interest as the time approaches for action on the plan of American Agricultural Chemical for adjusting back dividends on the preferred stock. Some quarters expect a dividend readjustment plan will provide for issuance of new securities in place of dividends in arrears.

Money Dominant Factor.

H. B. Edwards & Co. say: "The money situation continues to be the predominating sore spot, as far as speculative stock market activity is concerned, and it seems that there has not been, in years, a time when this factor has overshadowed the trend of corporation business and earnings as a detriminant to market sentiment to the extent that it does today. This is not unnatural, of course, considering the extent to which last year's great rise was predicated upon easy money, but it does obscure the other side of the economic picture at a time when general conditions look more encouraging and business sentiment is more optimistic than is usual in election years."

Credit Test Coming.

The tightest money period in several years faces the stock market. Aside from politics it promises to be the vital influence on trading and will give a test to the Reserve Banks' power to curb speculation. Next Friday will [illegible] dividend and interest payments. [illegible] later there are the income tax [illegible] and the government financing [illegible] care of as there are over [illegible] Treasury certificates maturing [illegible] of the Third Liberty refunding operation facing Mr. Mellon and his associates. The end of June brings the second [illegible] dividend and interest disbursements of the year. As the time for the [illegible] approach, politics promises to become more and more of a factor, and together with the outside demand for funds [illegible] bringing about the market [illegible] the money powers obviously desire.

American Iron and Steel Institute.

James A. Campbell, president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, has been elected vice president of American Iron and Steel Institute, succeeding Willis King, president of Jones & Laughlin, who was elected an honorary vice president of the institute. The Iron and Steel Institute of Great Britain has accepted an invitation of the American Institute to hold its 1932 meeting in this country.

Copper Stocks in Favor.

Continued advances in the price of copper metal and predictions that still higher quotations are likely in the near future have brought copper shares into favor. It is noted that public interest in the copper group has been increasing to the point still is [illegible] stocks are behind the market.

Rails Lose Early Speed.

Rails displayed a decidedly better tone early, but quieted down around midday. Railroad shares have been more or less neglected during recent sessions, apparently because of the strength in industrials. However, authorities who have been bullish on the rails for some time still are of the opinion that this group will be brought into line again and may be used to lead the market when the other stocks meet increased selling and become reactionary.

NARROW FLUCTUATIONS ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

FLURRY IN ARK. SUBSIDES

Stocks were moderately active, but prices were narrow at the opening of the new week on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange. The flurry in Arkansas, which caused a little excitement at the close last Friday, did not carry through into the opening this morning, but there was demand enough in the market to maintain the prices at the top level of last week's bulge.

A somewhat firmer tone was noted in a few of the miscellaneous industrials issues. Standard Sanitary was back again to 40 with a good demand apparent at that price. The recent crack in the New York market carried Standard down along with the rest on that board and there was a sympathetic decline in the local price, although offerings here were light. Dividends on the new Standard are in the same ratio as on the old stock, which was split three-for-one, and it is expected there will be no pronounced demonstrations in the shares until some idea is had of the directors' intention regarding a raise in the rate.

Fuels, aside from Arkansas Gas, were dull and narrow. Salt Creek Consolidated Oil was heavy and buyers were disinterested. Salt Creek is something of a mystery stock, in that it pays 80 cents a year in dividends and has been selling on yield basis of 10 per cent or more for about two years. It has a settled production of oil in the Wyoming fields sufficient to cover dividends easily, but failure of the stock to advance has created more or less distrust on the part of traders who instinctively shun high-yield issues.

PRODUCE MARKET

Dealings at the local wholesale produce district for 47 lines of fruit and vegetables were rather dull today. The quotations on fruit and vegetables were about unchanged. The poultry market was about steady and the quotations were unchanged. The demand was good and supplies were liberal.

Eggs and cheese were steady. The butter market was weak. No change was made in the quotations.

Car lot supplies were heavy, a total of 161 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 14 cars of apples, 1 beans, 17 cabbage, 4 carrots, 21 cantaloupes, 2 cucumbers, 4 celery, 1 grapes, 1 grapefruit, 7 lemons, 23 lettuce, 17 onions, 24 oranges, 1 spinach, 47 potatoes, 11 strawberries, 17 tomatoes, 1 watermelons, 2 peas and 1 [illegible]

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, May 28.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 3 points. Owing to the continued holiday in Liverpool there were no cables from that market to influence sentiment here, and there was probably a little selling on the failure of early weather news to show such unsettled conditions over the South as some of Saturday's buyers had anticipated.

Offerings were light, and after showing net declines of about 6 to 8 points, with October easing off to 20.63c, the market rallied on covering which may have been promoted by reports of a steady spot situation in the South. October rallied to 20.78c, with the market ruling about 6 to 8 points net higher at the end of the first hour.

The appearance of the weather map seemed to create apprehensions of showers or unsettled conditions in some parts of the South, and the forenoon market was firm on covering by early sellers and a moderate trade or commission-house demand. Rather unfavorable private crop advices also were in evidence on the advance which carried prices up to $20.82 for July and $20.96 for October, or about 22 to 27 points net higher, but the market showed reactions of [illegible] 8 to 10 points from the best at midday.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Spot raw sugar market was quiet early today, and in absence of business prices were nominally unchanged. Cuban holders were offering at 4.52, but small lots of nearby duty-free sugars could be had at 1-16 of a cent less, or 4.46 delivered. Inactivity in the spot market and the holiday abroad restricted operations in raw sugar futures market and in absence of aggressive demand, prices showed a sagging tendency under moderate liquidation and selling by houses with Cuban connections. Business was in limited proportions and the trade was inclined to be cautious and await fresh developments. The market opened unchanged to 1 point lower and eased off another point during the forenoon, with the list at midday 1 to 2 points net lower.

The refined sugar market was quiet. Prices were unchanged at 6.05 to 6.10 for fine granulated.

TENNIS COURTS BRING PROTEST

Residents of Carver street, East End, today complained to Council about the operation of tennis courts on that thoroughfare owned by the Keystone Tennis Club. In a joint letter, Mrs. Hazel McCarthy, of 218 Carver street; Mrs. W. U. Jones, of 216 Carver street, and Philip Sweeney, of 220 Carver street, said that neighbors and pedestrians are constantly in danger of being hit by tennis balls and that one blind person already has been hit. Remonstrances have not stopped the trouble, the letter said.

Efficiency in banks should be and is usually demanded by every depositor.

EFFICIENCY IN BANKING

Most customers of banks assume without question that all details, as well as all important aspects of their financial affairs, will be properly and efficiently handled by their banks. Greater precision is expected in banks than in almost any other kinds of business organizations. Efficiency in methods and precision in details are among the most important factors in banking, and are consequently most difficult of attainment.

The efficiency of the Farmers Deposit National Bank has been acquired by painstaking efforts over a period of ninety-six years.

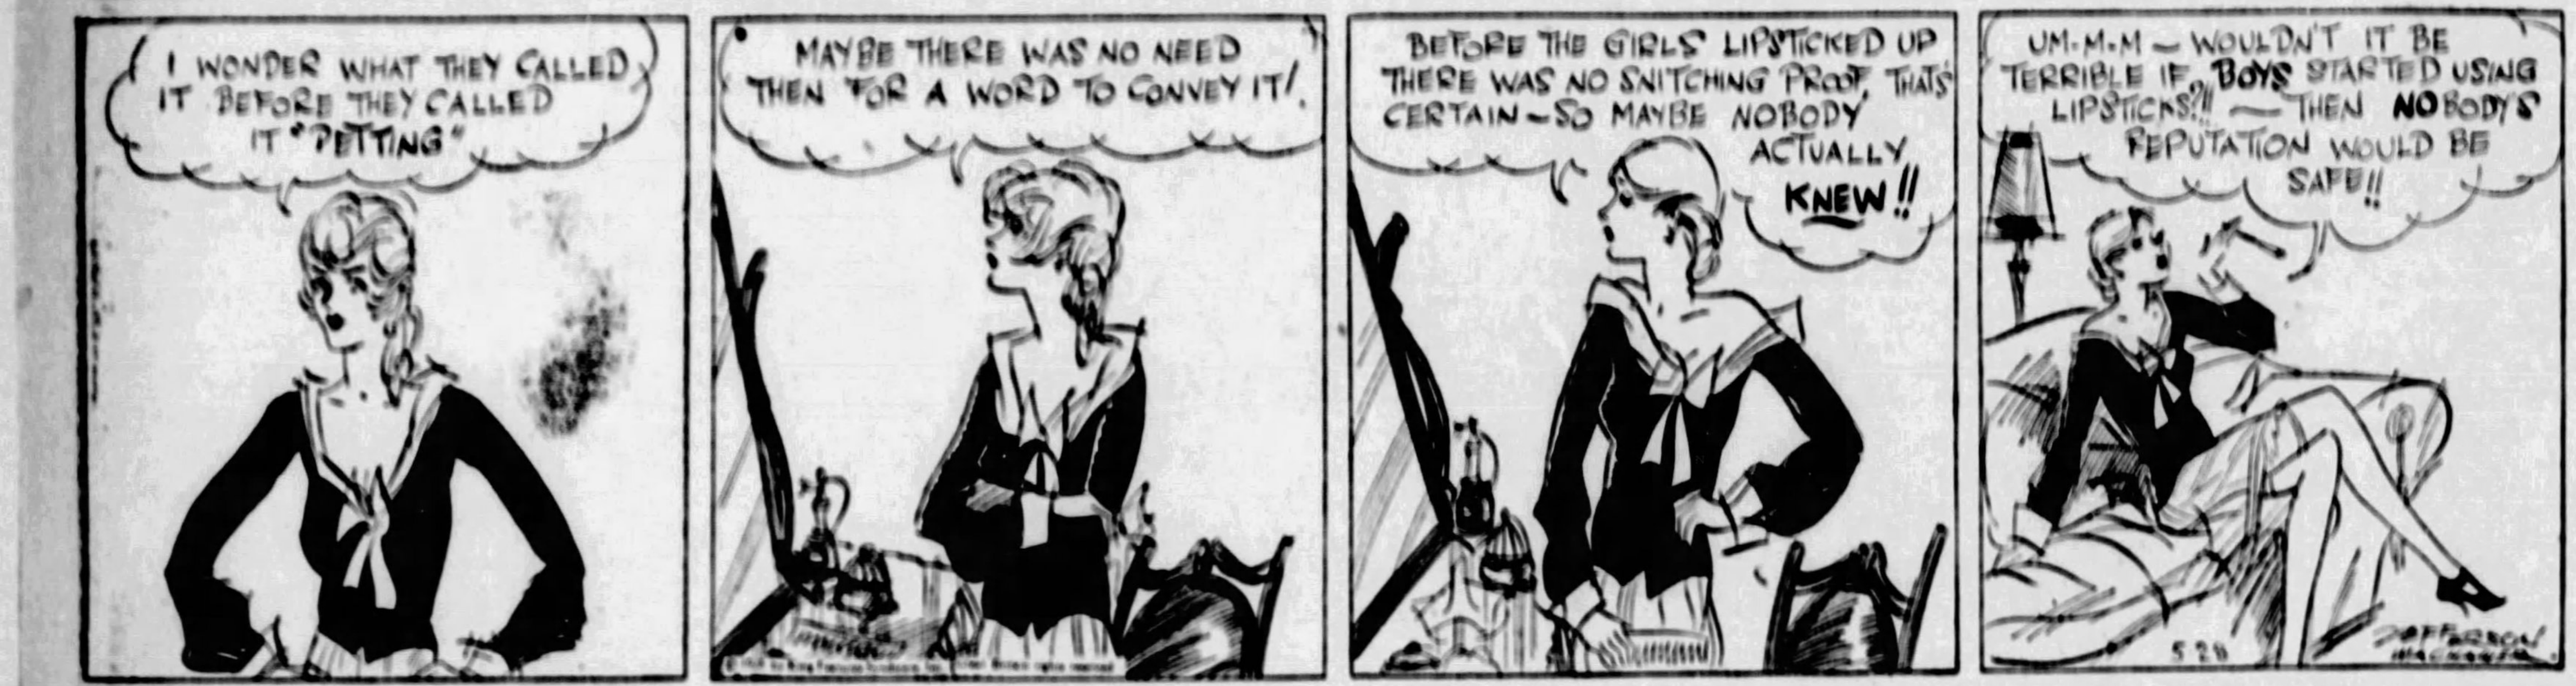
Horrible Thought



I WONDER WHAT THEY CALLED IT BEFORE THEY CALLED IT "PETTING"
MAYBE THERE WAS NO NEED THEN FOR A WORD TO CONVEY IT!
BEFORE THE GIRLS LIPSTICKED UP THERE WAS NO SNITCHING PROOF, THAT'S CERTAIN – SO MAYBE NOBODY ACTUALLY KNEW!!

A HYPNOTIC CURE THAT RELIEVED GEORGE BUNGLE'S MEMORY OF OFFENDED WEALTHY RELATIVES, WAS SO MUCH WORSE THAN THE AILMENT, THAT THE DISTANT CITY OF NEW BABYLON NOW HAS A NEW RESIDENT NAMED GUSTAVE BROWN.
LOOK! THERE GOES GUSTAVE BROWN, NEPHEW AND HEIR OF OLD MAN BROWN THE BILLIONAIRE.
WELL TO ME HE LOOKS LIKE ALL THE REST OF PEOPLE WHO EXPECT TO INHERIT DOUGH.
RECOGNITION CAME QUICKLY TO GUSTAVE FOR WHEN HE ARRIVED IN NEW BABYLON HE WAS A STRANGER TO EVERYONE EXCEPT A YOUNG LADY WHO MET HIM AT THE DEPOT.
OH YOU! DON ALFERDO! I AM SO HAPPY TO SEE YOU HERE. COMO ESTA?
I BEG YOUR PARDON, THERE MUST BE SOME MISTAKE! MY NAME IS GUSTAVE BROWN!
LATER, THE WEALTHIEST MAN IN A PROSPEROUS CITY FOUND SO MANY BROWN TRAITS AND FEATURES IN A NEW NAMESAKE, THAT THE OLD GENTLEMAN ASKED FOR HELP IN DISTRIBUTING AN ENLARGED FORTUNE.
YOUR NOSE! YOUR EYES! THOSE EARS! ALL BROWN! YOU ARE A BROWN OF BROWNS! AND I NEED YOU IN A GREAT GOOD WORK!
I ALWAYS DO MY BEST.
WHILE HER HUSBAND IS FAR AWAY FROM HOME DISTRIBUTING MONEY WITH A LAVISH HAND, JOSEPHINE BUNGLE IS FINDING THAT FRIENDS OF BETTER DAYS ARE GENEROUS ONLY WITH ADVICE.
YES, VIRGINIA, I'M JUST A LITTLE SHORT OF MONEY AND THOUGHT THAT SINCE WE'VE KNOWN EACH OTHER FOR YEARS THAT YOU'D—OH MONEY? WELL DARLING… I JUST HAVEN'T ANY RIGHT NOW BUT HAVE YOU TRIED TO GET IT FROM……OH LET ME THINK……WHO COULD I SEND YOU TO SEE?

The stepfamily's gone—John's gone—Jim's gone—and Ella's all by herself again—
I'M CERTAINLY NO FLAMING YOUTH, BUT I THOUGHT I WAS AT LEAST A MATCH FOR ONE OF TWO GOOD MEN—AND BOTH OF THEM WENT OUT! OH, WELL—DADDY USED TO SAY, 'LIFE IS ONE DARN FOOL THING AFTER ANOTHER, AND LOVE IS TWO DARN FOOL THINGS AFTER EACH OTHER.'
I GUESS I'LL KEEP MY HEAD, AFTER ALMOST LOSING IT! LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT MAY BE A GREAT TIME-SAVER, BUT SECOND SIGHT SOME TIMES PUTS THE CLOCK BACK! A GIRL NO SOONER GETS OVER BELIEVING IN FAIRY TALES WHEN SHE BEGINS TO BELIEVE LOVE STORIES!
BUT JUST THE SAME, I FEEL BLUE—HOO—HOO!
THERE ARE TWO THINGS GUARANTEED TO CURE ANY WOMAN'S BLUES: A GOOD CRY, AND A GOOD BUY! I'VE JUST HAD ONE, AND I'M GOING TO SHOP FOR THE OTHER!

Mussolini Rebels and Goes Into Exile

slowly picked up a loaf from the table, remained suspended for an instant in the soft light of the lamp, holding that light, yet terrible burden, handed it to the stranger, who took it quickly, almost brusquely.

"Thank you."

Silence still reigned.

"Good night."

He vanished in the darkness. The cruel sentimentalism of his character took the upper hand, clutching at his heart. He impetuously raised his arm to throw away that mendicant's loaf. Then he hesitated. His arm fell back to his side, and his dry mouth angrily bit into the bread. He ate silently, in the dark, walking from time to time, as if to shut out the vision of that lamp, that hand, and that silent table.

CHAPTER IV.

THE roadways of the world drew him on with their irresistible lure. Many still recall the time when he fought his hard, daily battle for bread. He worked for years as a mason's assistant, station porter, weaver, and butcher's boy. From time to time he was discharged because of one of his customary acts of rebellion against discipline and restraint. Then long intervals of vagrancy would ensue. But his vagrancy was intellectual. The unemployed rebel would become a temporary student at some university. His spirit was athirst for knowledge.

A Wandering Student

From Switzerland he passed on to France, Germany and Austria, studying the people of each country he lived in and learning their languages. Finally he came back to Italy to see his mother and serve in the army. He was assigned to the Bersaglieri, Italy's crack light infantry corps. It was at this time that the greatest sorrow in his life came to him. His mother died. But he was strong even in the midst of his grief. In his reply to a letter of sympathy sent him by his captain, he said:

"On behalf of my father, my sister and my brother, I wish to thank you, and with you all of my superiors and comrades, for the kind words with which you have tried to alleviate my sorrow. As you say, captain, the only thing that now remains for me to do is to follow my mother's advice and honor her memory by faithfully discharging all my duties as a soldier and a citizen. Women may weep and groan, but strong men must suffer and die in silence.

"In order to be able to work for the common good, and honor the sacred memories of the family and the nation, we must not give way to fruitless lamentations. It is well to commemorate the heroes whose blood has cemented the unity of Italy, but we must also prove that we are not unworthy descendants of those heroes, and that we are ready to present a mighty bulwark of breasts and bayonets when the barbarians from the north again attempt to reduce Italy to a geographic expression."

Shortly after he had completed his military service, he left for Switzerland again to resume his intellectual vagabondage.

One night he found himself alone, hungry and penniless, as usual. It was one of those moments in a man's life when the most beautiful surroundings make a gloomy, dismal impression. The got on his nerves. The lights gleaming in every window irritated him. The tables of restaurants, with their shining silverware and spotless linen, made him feel the pangs of hunger all the more keenly. He felt surging up within him an unconquerable hatred for the smug, prosperous city, whose gaiety seemed to mock his hunger. As his discomfort grew, he realized that there were only two courses open to him that night; either to disturb the peace and get arrested, or to crawl away and hide somewhere, like a snarling, wounded animal. He chose the latter alternative.

Vagabond's Luck

He wandered on till he came to a deserted bridge. He looked down, and seeing that the bed of the little stream was dry, he selected it for his shelter.

It was undoubtedly a fine bed chamber. There was plenty of fresh air and abundant light from the stars. In the distance could be heard the sounds of the happy city's merriment. Nearby absolute silence prevailed, save for the chirp of a chance cricket.

He looked about for a pillow and failed to find it. Then he leaned his shoulders against the wall, drew up his knees underneath his chin, laid his head upon them, shut his eyes and waited for sleep. He waited in vain. The cricket had a great deal to say to his lady-love, and other crickets occasionally turned the duet into a chorus, their chirps coming from afar on the brisk breeze that stirred the bushes, swayed the branches and penetrated to the wanderer's marrow.

Later on the crickets were replaced by whirring swarms of mosquitoes, merrily swirling over their luscious prey. Then came the noise of doors opening and shutting, and the manifold, mysterious voices of the night borne about by the wind. Finally the gleaming stars went out and a thin, persistent rain began to fall, striking the leaves of the trees, at first with the slow rythm of a tango, then accelerating to a waltz, and lastly taking on the swift tempo of a fox-trot.

Mussolini got up. A short distance from the bridge he saw a large wooden shack that formed part of a nearby printing plant. Rest and sleep awaited him there, he thought. He scaled a window and dropped inside. There was a strong smell of paper and ink about the place, but he didn't mind that. He groped his way to a corner, lay down on a heap of paper cuttings, and fell asleep.

He slept on long after the sun had risen. When he finally opened his eyes, he saw a waiting policeman standing patiently erect at his side.

Mussolini's first waking thought was that Swiss policemen were very polite not to disturb one's sleep.

"Well?" asked the policeman.

"Well?" countered Mussolini.

"What are you doing here?"

"Supervising my printing establishment, as you see."

"Get up."

"Just a minute. Let me tell the maid to bring me my morning suit and serve my breakfast."

"Cut out the fooling. Get up, or I'll help you to."

Mussolini smiled lazily, stretched out his hand, and said:

"That will be fine; help me."

"You're Italian, aren't you?"

"Yes, export department."

"All right, come with me."

Mussolini yawned, stretched and got up to follow the minion of the law.

It was a beautiful morning. The sun shone brightly in the sky. Tempting odors of freshly baked bread and ripe fruit were borne to the vababond's nostrils. Washerwomen sang at their work in the waters of a little stream, children on their way to school thronged the streets, and laborers issued from their homes to resume their wonted tasks.

"Come on! Hustle up!"

Mussolini scowling followed the guardian of law and order who, unaware of the storm that raged inside the prisoner's breast, urged him on from time to time.

The passers-by gave him curious, hostile glances as he walked down the steet, drawing to one side as though he had been a leper.

He was locked up in a cell, where he finally found a companion. It was a horribly deformed, unbelievably filthy old man, who crouched in a dark corner and occasionally thrust his hand inside his tattered shirt. Mussolini shuddered when the claw-like hand of the old man was fastened upon his arm.

"Who are you?" asked the old man in a voice made raucous by drink.

Mussolini turned away in disgust, without answering.

"Italian, eh?" inquired the heap of rags and filth, shaking his head and returning his bony hand to its favorite occupation. Mussolini scowled.

Then that human refuse, upon whom all parasites found hospitality, tried to be sarcastic.

"Knife business, eh?"

Mussolini could stand it no longer. With flashing eyes and a voice hoarse with indignation, he flung back:

"No, no knife! Italians don't use knives. They only use scissors to cut their hair and nails, water to wash, and common decency to make sure they're not bothering other people!"

The vagabound of the streets, the tattered representative of vice and wretchedness, who knew no liberty save that of theft and brutishness, remained open-mouthed and gaping before the fiery anger of this strange vagabond of a new ideal.

Providing Decent Polls Worthy of Commendation

The County Commissioners are to be commended for their decision to give decent polling places to those voters who have been casting their ballots in buildings that are not suitable. They have ordered a survey preliminary to going on with the work and are prepared to appropriate as much as $100,000 for this purpose.

Commissioner Armstrong said he believed the Commissioners would be glad to hear suggestions from voters in districts having polling places to which there are objections.

The Commissioners take a highly proper stand. Imagination connects dirty polling places with dirty work on the part of election boards. One rather looks for it, and some evidence in the present trials tends to prove the suggestion is borne out, even though it be only a coincidence.

While the Commissioners are giving proper voting places to the voters they also should make preparations to see that the law relating to the storage of ballot boxes is carried out. Let there be no more revelations of stolen ballots.

Enjoy All Wild Beauty, But Leave It Unspoiled

The Garden Club of Allegheny County makes a plea that the beauty of our highway borders be preserved. It properly suggests that motorists who despoil the wild flowers, break down trees to get a few blooms that wither and die before they reach the homes of those who plucked them, and leave litter along the roadside where they have stopped for a picnic lunch, spoil the pleasure of thousands of others who would enjoy what nature has provided for all.

There is truth in this and the additional statement that a carelessly tossed lighted cigaret and the smoldering fires of casual campers frequently cause forest and brush fires that do immense property damage as well as detroy the natural beauty of the countryside.

We all like to go out into the country for a ride. When we want a trip we are not content to drive around in the streets of the city. We head for the scenes of magnificence contained in the grandeur of nature spreading itself beyond the confines of the city. Let us all enjoy them and—as we find pleasure, leave it for others to find.

Just a suggestion to the numerous Memorial Day motorists.

They Surely Can Skate

Marvelous Are the Human Body and the Female WILL

CHAMPION SKATER, AGED 15

These two pictures of skating ladies make you feel as though you would fall down, out of sheer sympathy, and make a hole in the ice.

The lady at the top, Miss Sonia Henie, only fifteen years old, is probably the best female skater in the world. She comes from Oslo.

The lady below, Fraulein Melitta Brunner, an Austrian, certainly is not afraid of falling.

These pictures are printed to inspire interest in athletics of the right kind, and to remind young women that with will and practice, almost anything can be done.

MISS BRUNNER, FROM AUSTRIA

Either of these young ladies, balanced on a thin point of steel, on glittering ice, feels and IS as secure as you would be with both feet rubber-shod on rough pavement.

Truly we human beings are "Fearfully and wonderfully made," and like the man in the Bible, we should praise the Lord.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The First Americans.

OKLAHOMA, so closely associated with the memory of the first known inhabitants of this western world, who, by our advance have been driven almost into extinction, has recently gained fresh renown on account of the discovery within its borders of certain "artifacts," supposed to have been made by a prehistoric people who lived in America as long ago as the "Pleistocene" epoch. This corresponds with what is more familiarly known as the Great Ice Age, with its several successive glacial stages, within which, or between which, the earliest known types of mankind—the "Men of the Old Stone Age"—lived and died. The beginning of this epoch runs back hundreds of thousands of years.

"Artifacts" are "anything made or modified by human art," and in archaeology the question is often debated whether certain stone or bone objects are really artifacts or only accidental products shaped by natural forces. Upon the decision of that question (and sometimes such a decision can be no more than the statement of greater or lesser probability) may depend thousands of years of "prehistory," as happens in this particular case.

The objects in question were found at Frederick, Okla., buried in a bed of gravel situated on a hilltop rising about 100 feet above the surrounding valley. They consist mainly of "grinding stones" resembling those made by the Sioux and other Indians a generation ago, before they learned from white men how to supply themselves with more effective implements.

Harold J. Cook, of the Colorado Museum of Natural History, holds that they date from the Pleistocene, the gravels being manifestly of that epoch. Some agree with him, others disagree, even disputing the claim that the objects are artifacts at all. Without taking sides in the discussion it may be remarked that there exists a strong indisposition to admit that primitive man lived in America as early as he did in Europe and Asia. The favorite theory at present is that the first inhabitants of North America came over from Asia by way of the Bering Sea and Aleutian Islands route, and several expeditions have been undertaken, or proposed, with the professed expectation of finding archaeological evidence in support of this theory.

The fact that the white discoverers of America, five or six hundred years ago, found it thinly populated in most places, while nowhere had its inhabitants attained as high a degree of civilization as that which existed in Europe, might be taken, a priori, as evidence that it had never possessed inhabitants at a very early period. On the other hand, it should be remembered that even in the "Old World" no connected history goes back more than two or three thousand years beyond the Christian era.

Remarkable ancient races lived and flourished in Western Europe, some of them, like the Cro-Magnons, evidently possessing a high degree of intellectual power, and yet they have left but scattered and uncertain remains and their connection with earlier and later races can only be conjectured. Their homes have since become the homes of the most civilized peoples of modern times, who, however, have only lately discovered that these earlier men ever had an existence! Yet they dwelt on the same soil. Here in America the search has hitherto, for many reasons, been far less concentrated and insistent. It ought to be encouraged and scattered efforts should be co-ordinated and pursued on a systematic plan.

The scenes in North America during the Ice Age were at least as remarkable as those in Europe, and it cannot yet be said positively that there were no human witnesses of that strange time on this side of the ocean; that no hunter with flint-pointed spear pursued the mastodon or saw him mired in the swamps that have preserved his giant skeletons for our museums.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

You Can't Afford

IF YOU are a salaried man do not insist upon paying the dinner bill or the theater expense for the business or professional man who is well off.

You do not make the impression sought by such an offer.

The man of affairs, who has been accustomed to watching his business expenses and who has regulated his expenses according to his income, does not want you to spend money for his enjoyment.

He knows pretty well whether or not you can afford the outlay.

If he is convinced that you cannot afford it he thinks you are a poor manager—that you haven't good judgment.

Therefore, instead of elevating yourself in his estimation you have lowered your standing.

The sum which you, as a salaried man, might pay for the entertainment of a well-to-do person is likely to represent a considerable drain upon your income if you tried to "keep up" in your associations.

The amount means little to the man who has plenty.

Be consistent, not penurious, and keep the respect of others as well as your own self-respect.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

The Fault

THERE are a host of causes to assign
For failure and mistake
Not easily can any man resign
The plan he joyed to make.

And so he blames the day or wind or crowd,
His helpers or his foes;
But not himself; his stubborn will is proud.
Still unconvinced he goes.

It is a wiser way to seek the flaw
That lay, unguessed, within
To mar the perfect working of the law
Whereunder each may win.

Within, alone, lie all the faults that turn
Man's feet down failure's maze;
Within lie, too, the splendid traits that spurn
The past for better ways.

Tales that are Told

His Joy Ride

HE SAT down on a low wall with a groan. He had walked to the end of the road, only to find he had taken the wrong turning.

Suddenly he heard a motor horn, and, leaving his seat, waved frantically at the passing motorist.

It was in vain, and with another groan he began to retrace his steps when, in the distance, he saw another car approaching. This one was going much slower, and when it reached him nearly stopped. Joyfully he clambered in, when, to his amazement, he found he was alone.

Alarmed, he tried to get out, but the car was going quicker now, until, with a jerk, it came to a sudden halt. He stepped out to confront two perspiring individuals.

"Where did you come from?" they asked in amazement.

He pointed to the car.

"Well, I'm blowed! And we've been pushing the bally thing for the last three miles."

Crushing

IT WAS Helen Highnote's great chance. At last she had obtained that long-looked-for engagement at a London concert hall.

She gave of her best to the audience. But the effect was not exactly what she had desired. From her point of view it was not what it ought to have been.

At last came the end. Helen could not make it out—no encore! Where was the deafening applause she had heard in her dreams every night since the engagement was booked?

After the concert she interrogated the conductor.

"Don't you think you could have done something with your orchestra to improve my song? That drum nearly drowned my voice!"

"Well, madam, we might have had two or three more drums!"

He's Changed, Too

THERE was an air of unrest in the sitting-room. Jones wanted to read his paper, but Mrs. Jones preferred to talk.

At last he threw the paper angrily on the floor and faced his wife.

"Look here!" he snapped. "Whenever I'm at home you're either hammering away at the piano or else your tongue runs on like a mill-race. You were quiet enough before we were married."

"Of course I was," retorted Mrs. Jones. "Before we were married you were always holding my hands and I couldn't play, and you kept my lips so busy that I couldn't talk."

Nameless

IT WAS the first night of the new show, and the producer was hurrying from the dressing-room to the front of the house. In the wings he found two actors who played the burlesque horse of the production. The one who played the front legs stopped him.

"Is my name on the program?" he asked.

"I don't know—I haven't seen the program yet," said the producer. "I'll find out later."

"How about your name?" he went on, addressing the man who played the hind legs.

"Don't you put my name on the program," the back legs replied. "I don't want to be known as a type."

TWO laborers were arguing with each other about accidents.

The first declared that a shipwreck was a far greater catastrophe than a railway disaster, but his friend was not to be convinced.

"Why do you think a shipwreck is worse?" he asked.

The other thought hard. It was easy enough to argue, but more difficult to give reasons. At last, however, he had a brilliant idea.

"Well," he replied, "in a train smash there you are, but in a shipwreck where are you?"

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 28.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and sat all morning at a typewriter achieving six scant lines which I flung away, and off for a walk with my dog. In the park was a tattered fellow fallen in a fit, and a lady in a limousine stopped and took him to a hospital.

And along a path hair stiffened on the dog's back and he growled menacingly albeit nobody was about and I discovered it was the animal smell from the zoo near by. Home to my labours again, but accomplished nothing. And depressed with the notion I may be cuckoo, my wife, poor wretch, being sure of it.

In the evening to a dinner, and talked to John Golden, whom I had never met. And also there were Charles Hanson Towne, David E. Town, E. B. Parker and others, and later with my wife and John and Margaret Kennedy to see "Porgy," a brave play and as realistic as any I ever saw. So to bed.

As result of an automobile accident an actor found himself in need of blood transfusion at a hospital. A Times Square rounder wired him: "As result of Broadway gin, my blood is mostly formaldehyde, but if you think it will do any good I can spare you a quart."

One of those garumphing majors with a walrus mustache, bushy eyebrows and a white vest clumped out of his club on Fifth avenue.

"Get a taxi" he said.

"Will this pink one do?" inquired the starter, pointing to one at the curb.

It would seem ping-pong has not gone the way of crokinole and other games of its period. There is a steady sale of ping-pong outfits, and mostly in aristocratic areas. There are still ping-pong tournaments and the most devoted followers are men. Ping-pong killed the game of tiddle-de-winks as dead as a door nail, and that's something.

Through oval windows on a Broadway corner crowds watch intricate machines rolling out cigarets—many thousands hourly. Mingling in the crowds constantly are two plainclothes men who watch for pickpockets. Whenever crowds are attracted in passing, the purse-lifters find a haven.

The lobbies of those dim-lit hotels in the Forties that change names with such frequency offer a colorful slice of tenderloin life. The clerks are hard-boiled, furtive gentlemen who can only express themselves intelligently in underworld argot. In passable English, they seem inarticulate.

Elevators are manned by work-worn and sullen colored boys who will only brighten up at a tip. Among lobby loungers every stranger is eyed with faint suspicion. Most of the patrons are racketeers living in fear of "the rap."

There are the high-waisted men with drooping cigarets and much fly talk who live off women. The lady shop-lifters are said to be their best providers. And there are the peroxided, wan-cheeked girls who also give street earnings to wastrels.

Late at night, the shady hotel patrons fraternize. Men in shirt sleeves and kimonoed women with shaggy white dogs group about the entrance. Froway heads hang from upstairs windows and there is the grinding wheeze of a phonograph.

An hour after midnight the bellhops are racing to the lunch counters and returning with sandwiches. The dips, dice sharpers and other creatures of the night who prey on humanity gather shortly before dawn to count the spoils. But from daylight until 4 o'clock in the afternoon all life and motion in the shady hotels seem to suspend.

There is a certain dapper jewelry salesman who becomes ubiquitous when Douglas Fairbanks comes to town. Wherever Fairbanks goes he finds him. Once he returned to his hotel apartment and there sat the salesman. "How do you suppose he got in here?" a friend asked the actor. "I don't know," he replied. "He must came out of the woodwork."

Youth and Tragedy

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Strangely enough, tragedy and youth seem to run together, while old age is characterized by calmness and comedy.

The older a man gets the more he cares to see plays and read novels with happy endings.

It is the young that want the whole dramatis personae butchered in the third act.

It is interesting to note that children like bloody stories. Fee, Fow, Fie, Fum yarns interest them most. They are delighted when the old witch bites off somebody's head or when the hero butchers 200 or 300 of his antagonists.

The same thing is observable in the literature of early peoples.

I have just been reading the Antigone of Sophocles. Some blood!

One gentleman slays his father, another marries his mother by mistake and when he finds out his slip, puts his own eyes out. Two brothers kill each other on the battlefield and a lady is put into a dungeon to rot. It was not as a punishment for their various crimes, but simply because the gods didn't like them.

There is no such thing as marrying and living happily ever after in early folk lore.

Reading the ancient ballads is a pretty lugubrious operation. Lord Lovell returns from his travels to find his lady love in her coffin and he enjoys the luxury of dying beside her. Other gentlemen are hewn, drowned, bewitched and butchered.

Young poets run to tragedy. You will find them using continually the words never and always. Things are final with them. Fate is heartless. It is a bitter world all round. Women and children suffer, the hospitals are full, rainy days predominate and whats the use generally!

As a man gets older he finds most sad things never happen. We get through somehow and one who has escaped the buffetings of an outrageous fortune for 60 years is rather inclined to look leniently upon life.

It is generally supposed that youth is the unfailing source of optimism, while old people are pesimists, but the facts hardly bear out this assertion. Most kindly spirits whom I know are past 50.

Right Angles

By ALEXANDER CAIRNS

She Was Right

SHE is a woman with dimples in her soul and springtime melodies in her heart. Morningly she stands by her orient window and breathes a whispered orison to the God of the golden sun and the Galilee hills.

At her skirts cling two angels in chrysalis, replicas of the carvings of a Phidias. They are burdens to her, are those cherubs, burdens like the wings on a dove or the white bannered sails of a barkentine.

And when the neighborhood runs aground for lack of a simile of unselfishness they say, "Well, it's just like Mrs. Dimples over on Poinsettia Parkway." Then the conversation shifts into high again and winds away over the beauteous hills of collocution.

Her husband is the envy of half the men on the street. He seems as carefree as a lark in the azure skies of old Albion, and as he walks the sunlit way he seems to have springs in his heels and his heart.

Meeting Madame Dimples the other day, as she strolled the boulevard with her two animate sunbeams, I propounded the olden query as to the secret talisman of deep-rooted joy. And her answer was the olden response just a little more individualized and dolled up in the unpretentious garb of the home.

"Surely," she said, "the secret of happiness is to find someone to love and then make a business of loving. We must not make our love service casual or incidental, but causal and purposeful. Casual kindness fills the street walking four abreast, but causal kindness, the kindness that thinks and plans, has a four-car highway to himself. Joy is a reflection from the sunshine of another soul. Introspection is o'erripe selfishness. Only in the devotion that forgets can one find the happiness that leaps and splashes like an Alpine cascade."

As I left the dimpled souled woman and walked on to my daily task, I felt that somehow I had been on some Riga or Pisgah or transfiguration mountain. Here was a philosophy divine in its simplicity and older than the constancy of Penelope. And this open sesame of gladness was incarnate in a humble woman at my door.

And she was right!

The most popular philosophical writer of all time told the world and his wife recently that he had found his deepest joy in his little girl with only a handful of summers on her golden head.

Drop around sometime and I'll introduce you to Lady Dimples.
